

Thant Reports Progress in Mideast Talks

Egypt Withholds Opinion; Truce Expires Friday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Secretary-General U Thant says the Middle East peace talks at the United Nations are showing some signs of progress and the cease fire should be extended, but Egyptian government officials appeared cool to the suggestion today.

The Cairo government with held its official reaction, presumably waiting for President Anwar Sadat's speech to the National Assembly Thursday, the day before the six-month-old truce is to expire.

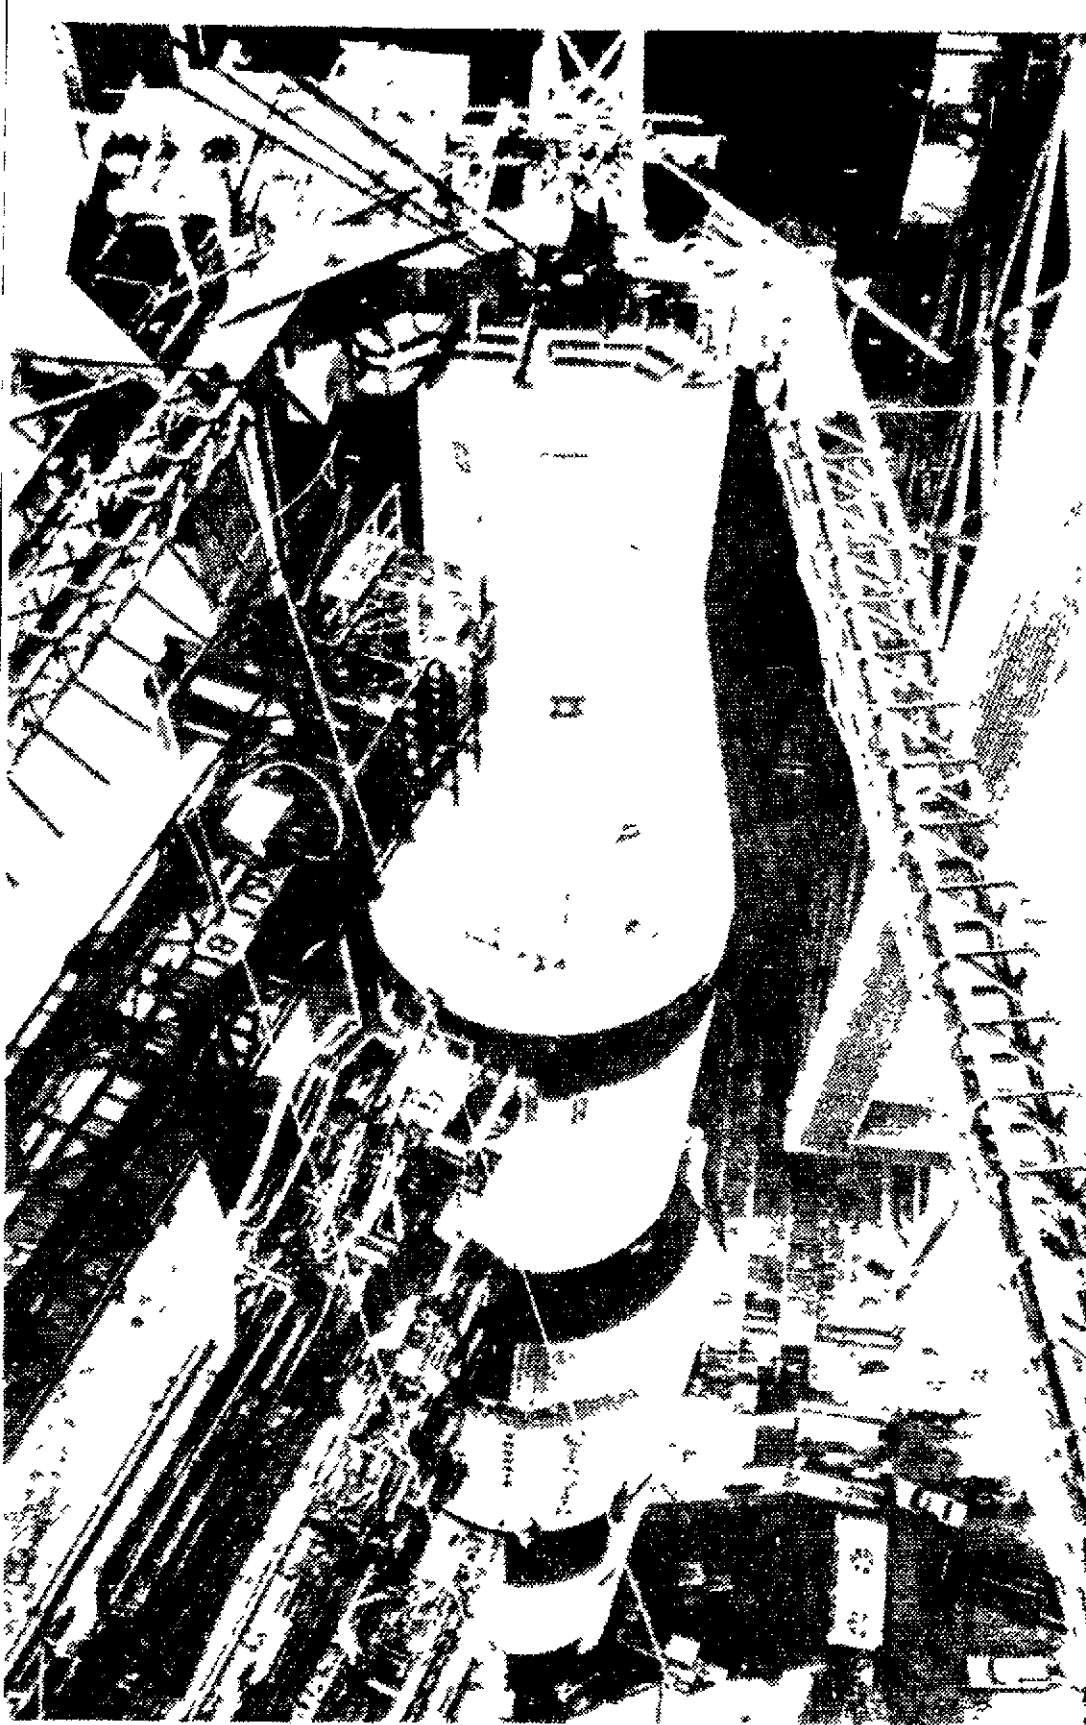

But a government spokesman Munir Hafez, said "It is clear from U Thant's statement that he had nothing new on the progress of the talks." Egypt repeatedly has said it will accept no extension unless there is significant headway in discussions. Mediator Gurnar V Jarring is holding with representatives of Israel, Jordan and Egypt.

Thant reported to the Security Council Tuesday that the talks are young, and issues still must be clarified. But he said he found "grounds for cautious optimism" because serious discussions were under way and "there has been some progress in the definition of their positions."

He appealed "in this very difficult and crucial stage of the discussions, to withhold fire, to exercise military restraint and to maintain the quiet which has prevailed in the area since August 1970."

Mohammed H. el-Zayyat, Egypt's chief U.N. delegate, said he would forward the appeal to Cairo. He said, however, "It is hard to see, as of now, any reasons for optimism."

Nixon, Advisers Silent on Laos

WASHINGTON (AP) — With President Nixon consulting key national security advisers, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has asked for information about a rumored U.S.-South Vietnamese operation near the Laotian border.

Nixon held an unannounced meeting with some of his high advisers late Tuesday, and administration spokesmen refused to discuss military plans—except to repeat assurances no U.S. troops have crossed into Laos and none will.

There was no indication any decision was reached in Nixon's meeting with Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, Adm. Thomas Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, foreign-policy adviser Henry Kissinger, and Richard Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Troops Massed
The Washington Post reported today 25,000 South Vietnamese ground troops were massed near the Laotian border Tuesday, "preparing to raid Vietnamese Communist bases and supply lines in Laos with U.S. air support."

Operating with them U.S. sources unofficially acknowledged, is a screening force of about 9,000 American troops who are under instructions to halt at the Laotian border when cross-border operations begin, the newspaper reported.

Rogers insisted last Friday that unlimited U.S. airpower will be available anywhere in Indochina to protect GIs withdrawing from South Vietnam. He refused at that time to discuss whether the assurance was related to any planned offensive.

Foreign Reports
Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he cannot understand why Rogers failed to tell the panel last week about plans for the operation which some foreign newsmen say already is under way.

Fulbright said the secrecy-covered operation reminds him of last April when Rogers testified before the committee two days before the start of the U.S. incursion into Cambodia.

"He didn't mention that either," Fulbright said after the committee voted to summon Rogers and Laird as soon as possible for testimony about the operation—in open session if Rumors of some massive assault into the Laotian panhandle designed to destroy Communist supply lines leading into South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia from the north, have been building since last Friday.

U.S. officials, here and in Saigon, have refused to discuss the rumors. However, Laird conceded publicly Tuesday that an embargo has been imposed on news stories relating to such an offensive.

Laird Reply
Asked on Capitol Hill about the rumored operation, Laird replied "I have absolute confidence in the news media and the embargo which you are aware of. I have no further comment at this time in response to your question."

Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, senior Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, said the State Department told him last Friday U.S. and South Vietnamese troops are massed near the Laotian border "for a large operation we might be undertaking." The administration has given us to understand they're preparing for a massive attack from the north."

Meanwhile, a Hanoi broadcast said the pro-Communist Pathet Lao sent an urgent message to Great Britain and the Soviet Union, cochairmen of the 1962 Geneva Convention on Laos, denouncing "new U.S. adventures" in Laos.

The message referred to an intrusion into Laos of Thai troops and of a U.S.-South Vietnamese buildup poised "to enter and attack Laos."

In Saigon a South Vietnamese spokesman said he could neither confirm nor deny reports that Saigon forces had entered Laos.

The Foreign Relations Committee voted to hold new public hearings on U.S. involvement in Indochina, including Nixon administration plans for ending the war.

The hearings would cover such alternative proposals as the Hatfield-McGovern amendment to cut off funds for U.S.

Saigon Given Full Support In Cambodia

SAIGON, (AP) — South Vietnamese forces have begun a new drive in Cambodia with full U.S. air support to crush North Vietnamese and Viet Cong base camps and sanctuaries, it was disclosed tonight.

South Vietnamese officials said the United States is providing helicopter gunships, medical evacuation helicopters and logistics support to the 10,000 Saigon troops.

There are no U.S. ground troops taking part in the operation, the officials added.

The South Vietnamese forces include 2,500 fresh troops thrown into the drive by Lt. Gen. Do Cao Tri, commander of the 3rd military region in the southern half of South Vietnam. The region shares 231 miles of border with Cambodia. The other 7,500 troops already were at bases inside Cambodia.

The new drive is similar to the incursions across the border last May and June. It has been under way about a week. Officials said there has been contact, but none of major significance.

The U.S. 1st Aviation Brigade is providing scores of helicopters to back up Tri's forces.

The aim of the drive, "is to be sure we haven't missed anything that would endanger the withdrawal of U.S. troops."

About 20,000 U.S. combat troops are being withdrawn from the 3rd military region, which includes Saigon and 11 surrounding provinces, during the next three months. This will leave only about 5,000 U.S. combat troops in the region, plus support troops.

Allied headquarters also reported stepped up fighting in the northern provinces of South Vietnam for the third straight day.

Across the border in southern Laos, hundreds of American planes struck at enemy supply convoys and dumps in the 117th day of the most sustained bombing of the war.

Potential Problem for Lander

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — An abnormal battery reading was recorded in the Apollo 14 lunar landing craft today but ground controllers were not immediately sure whether it signalled a problem or was just a faulty reading.

The potential problem was revealed while the astronauts slept just hours before their ship was to swing into orbit around the moon early Thursday.

Mission Control Center considered waking two of the space men to send them back into the moon ship to test the battery in question. But officials said it was more likely they would be allowed to complete their sleep period, which was to end shortly after 5 p.m. CST.

Initial word of the faulty reading came nearly an hour after it was revealed by informed sources.

The batteries are the power source for the ascent stage of the lunar module that is to lift astronauts Alan B. Shepard Jr. and Edgar D. Mitchell from the surface of the moon Saturday afternoon and enable them to fly to a rendezvous with Stuart A. Roosa in the command ship.

Entered Ship
Shepard and Mitchell earlier today had entered the lunar ship through a connecting tunnel, and after a two and one-half hour inspection, Shepard had pronounced it "immaculate."

However, readings on the ground showed one of the two batteries in the ascent stage registering 37 volts and the second one with a low reading of 36.7 volts. On launch day Sunday at Cape Kennedy both read 37.

On launching from the moon, the batteries are hooked in parallel in case one of them failed and power had to be drawn from the other. If different voltages were flowing across each battery, electrical systems would be fouled, including the critical spaceship computer.

The officials said there was a possibility it was only a bad reading, but that the astronauts would have to return to the lunar module to find out. They shut down the systems in the vehicle when they left it.

Instrument Test
A Mission Control spokesman said "If a second reading indicates a shift in the signal condition, then it would indicate faulty instrumentation rather than a fault of the battery itself."

There are two batteries in the ascent stage of the lunar module, the cabin section that is designed to lift the astronauts off the moon and fly to a rendezvous with the orbiting command module. The descent or landing stage is left on the moon.

Second Supply

If one of the two ascent batteries failed the remaining battery would provide sufficient power to accomplish a safe takeoff and rendezvous and docking with the command ship.

However, it is doubtful if Mission Control center would commit Shepard and Mitchell to a landing if only one of the batteries was functioning.

There was no indication in the air-to-ground conversation with the astronauts that anything was amiss as they settled down for the sleep period.

They were awakened shortly after they dozed off to correct a valve setting when Mission Control noted an excess overboard flow of oxygen.

Earlier they had televised a picture of the moon, a shimmering half crescent that loomed larger and larger as earth shrank in the distance.

At 9:12 a.m. CST Shepard, Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa zipped through a so-called "light zone" in which the gravitational influence of the earth and moon is equal. They were 212,774 miles from earth and 28,234 miles from the moon.

Postal Rates Increased

WASHINGTON — In an effort to reduce the chronic deficit costs of the U.S. Postal Service, higher rates will be put into effect about May 15.

Changes include a rise from 6 to 8 cents for letters, an increase from 10 to 11 cents for air mail and a hike from 5 to 6 cents for post cards.

Third class bulk, commonly known as "junk mail" will go from a minimum of 3.8 to 5 cents per piece. Special delivery will rise from 45 to 60 cents and registered mail valued up to $100, from 30 to 95 cents.

Parcel post was not affected. But also announced was a 10 cent boost in the first pound special cost of mailing fourth class books, records and films.

Newspaper Rates

Second class rates for newspapers and magazines will rise by 142 per cent spread over five years. This would add 3 to 4 cents a copy to the cost of mailing most of these items.

The increases, which are expected to arouse protests from the publishing industry, were announced by Asst. Postmaster General James W. Hargrove. The officials feel he said, that this "will put the postal system on a sound financial basis for the first time in many years."

Hargrove also served notice that further increases might be necessary to finance pay increases now under negotiation between the new postal service and employe unions.

The price of a first class 6 cent postage stamp has been raised three times since 1959, when it was 3 cents.

The rates approved by Postmaster General Winton M. Blount and the Board of Governors of the government-owned Postal Corporation are subject to change by an independent five member Postal Rate Commission which took over Congress' ratemaking powers under the 1970 Postal Reorganization Act.

The rates were submitted Monday to the commission, which has 30 days to issue final rate changes.

Because the commission was not expected to complete its work within that time, the service's new rates will go into effect about mid-May on a temporary basis until the final decision.

The higher rates (the maximum one third increase permitted pending a final decision by the commission) were intended to raise more than $14 million in additional revenues in the 1971-'72 fiscal year and to "shift more of the costs from the taxpayer generally to those who use the mails the most."

The Postal Service is counting on Congress to subsidize operating costs by another $16 million.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, right, and selective Service Director Curtis W. Tarr are witnesses before the Senate Armed Services Committee Tuesday, testifying on the possible suspension of the draft.

Few Volunteers Want to Enter Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army analysts estimate only about one of every five young men who entered the Army last year was a true volunteer and not draft-motivated.

This indicates, now far the Army still must travel to come in sight of the all-volunteer force President Nixon hopes to achieve by mid 1973.

Manpower specialists feel the 1970 experience, the first full year under the random draft system, gave them a reliable idea of the extent men truly volunteered or were avoiding the draft in order to choose a branch of service and a specialty.

For purposes of the study, Army analysts calculated any young man who drew lottery number 240 or higher last year was certain of escaping the draft.

It was found that 64,000 men in this draft-unfavorable group enlisted in the Army in 1970—about 21 per cent of the 296,000 men who entered that year's service. Another 73,000 volunteers were classed as draft motivated and 159,000 men were draftees.

In testifying Tuesday before the Senate Armed Services Committee, Pentagon manpower chief Roger Kelley seemed to give a somewhat more bullish estimate of true volunteers than the Army study showed.

Kelley indicated about half of the enlisted volunteers are true volunteers.

But he was omitting from his calculation the large bloc of enlistment more attractive draftees and he was talking about all service, not just the Army.

Nixon is working to reduce the armed forces by one million men below the Vietnam war peak of 3.5 million places, considering the strength of the regular military establishment force. So is Rep. E. Edward He-

The Army study and Kelley's testimony agree generally that the new entrants into the National Guard and reserve are enlisted only part of the difficulty confronting the armed services, particularly the Army.

Re-enlistments fell last year to their lowest point since the mid 1960s, and ROTC enrollments also were way down

MADISON (AP) — Opponents panics doing business across the state lines and promote family well being. The proposed law would take effect in 1972. The measure was supported Tuesday at a state Assembly before the Assembly State Affairs Committee by its author, Rep. Lewis Mittness, D-Janesville, which would bring Wisconsin in line with federal law and 45 of the 50 states, said the bill would stimulate tourism, simplify business transactions for com-

Roseleip, R-Darlington, and various veterans and patriotic groups. Roseleip said Lincoln and Washington's birthdays were "God given," and should not be changed for the sake of personal or family comfort. The panel delayed action on the measure. A similar proposal is being considered by a state Senate committee chaired by Roseleip.

Fish in Wisconsin River Exceed Safe Mercury Level

MADISON (AP) — An extensive investigation has been conducted since April, 1970, with pollution in Wisconsin shows fish and river bottom many fish in a 350-mile stretch of the Wisconsin River south of Rhinelander contain mercury residue in excess of the 5 part per million established by the Food and Drug Administration for removing fish from interstate markets. The investigation, conducted by the Department of Natural Resources during the past year, also shows excess mercury residues in fish samples from a 40-mile stretch of the Flambeau River below the Flambeau Flowage and the 50-mile stretch of the Chippewa River extending from its confluence with the Flambeau to Eau Claire. The information is in a progress report on the investigation published by the DNR and prepared by Stanton Kleinert, the department's coordinator for mercury studies. Since April the report states that an content of fish, the report identifies them as:

1. Natural mercury content of bedrock, soils, sediments and waters.
2. Mercury pollution of the environment.
3. Size and ages.
4. Water chemistry.
"Mercury," the investigators found, "is released into water more readily under acid conditions. The Wisconsin and Flambeau rivers contain mildly acid waters."
"Alkaline waters such as the Milwaukee and Fox River systems in eastern Wisconsin contain fish of low mercury content in spite of extensive industrial and urban development and past use of mercury compounds in the watersheds," they said. Mercury levels in fish taken from other bodies of water do not approach those found in the Green Bay, Lake Superior and Wisconsin, Flambeau and Chippewa rivers, the investigators said.
"Continuous release of mercury from deposits in the Wisconsin River may produce high mercury levels for many years to come," the report said.
The DNR's investigation of river-bottom sediments also turned up "elevated mercury levels" in the lower Fox River and Milwaukee Harbor, but not at dangerous levels, and several deposits were found in the Chippewa-Flambeau river basin. The report emphasized that Wisconsin River water is safe for swimming, boating and other water recreations.

3 Indicted In Whitewater Bomb Plot

MADISON (AP) — Three young men have been indicted and arrested by authorities on charges they conspired to blow up electrical transmission towers near Whitewater, Atty. Gen. Robert Warren announced today. Warren said the three were picked up after the indictments were returned Tuesday by a Walworth County grand jury and were in custody of the sheriff. He identified the three as Edward C. Starkeson, 20, Whitewater; Gregory Bruenger, 23, Milwaukee; and Charles W. Bagstad, 23, La Grange. Warren said he did not know whether the alleged conspiracy was connected in any way with a fire at the Old Main building on the Whitewater Campus last year.

"This whole matter is under continuing investigation," Warren said. The indictment said the defendants conspired to dynamite two steel electricity transmission towers belonging to the Wisconsin Electric Co. in the town of Whitewater. Warren said his agents, who became aware of the alleged conspiracy in December, found about 40 sticks of dynamite at a residence in Whitewater occupied by Starkeson. "It was their intention," Warren said, "to promulgate a mass rally during hearings for four professors" to "blacken the city of Whitewater" and create unrest. The hearing was investigating university allegations that the four professors encouraged students to boycott classes during demonstrations a year ago.

Congressmen Voted Out of Office But Not Out of Government Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Election defeat is a bitter cup for a congressman, but it's sweeter if his party controls the federal sugar. For example, Clark MacGregor of Minnesota didn't even suffer a pay cut when he lost a Senate race to Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey. As President Nixon's chief lobbyist, MacGregor still draws the $42,500 a year he did serving in the House. George Bush of Texas, another GOP congressman who lost a Senate race against Lloyd M. Benson Jr., will get the same salary once he is confirmed as Nixon's ambassador to the United Nations. Almost as well paid is Thomas E. Kleppe, who lost the Senate race in North Dakota. He earns $40,000 a year as administrator of the Small Business Administration. In all, 12 of the 26 Republicans who left Congress last year through defeat or retirement have now been appointed to federal jobs, none paying less than $14 a day. Other Senate-race casualties tried for the GOP nomination include Richard Roudsbus of Indiana, now a $121,28-a-day named deputy administrator of the Veterans Administration and Laurence J. and Atmospheric Administration at an undetermined salary. Robert V. Denney retired voluntarily from Congress, and the President appointed him as a $40,000-a-year U.S. District judge in Nebraska, his home state. Republicans are not the only politicians who gravitate toward federal nests after election defeat. Democrats have fared well when their party was in the White House, and this year only the Stockyards Administration stepped a House subcommittee from creating a $35,500-a-year job for Samuel N. Friedel of Maryland, chairman of the national administration committee. Also, not all departing GOP congressmen have paying federal jobs. Ousted Rep. Ed Foreman of New Mexico earns $114 a day as an oil and land consultant to the Secretary of the Interior, Rogers C. B. Morton, who used to be GOP National Chairman. Glenn Cunningham of Nebraska saves the wounds of his reelection failure with $35,633 a year as special assistant in the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation. Howard W. Pollock of Alaska, another senate loser, John S. Wold of Wyoming, plans to turn to his profession as a geologist for the new National Oceanic Dressed in Civil War garb, Burton Kannenberg of Oconomowoc appears before a Wisconsin legislative committee Tuesday in Madison to protest the proposed date changes of four legal holidays, including Memorial Day. Kannenberg represented the Sons of Union Veterans. (AP Wirephoto)

Testimony for Defense

Manson Cared, Woman Declares

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A class home near Los Angeles, where Manson lived with her and Miss Atkins, bright-eyed admirer whom Manson nicknamed "Squeaky," has unfolded for the Sharon Tate murder trial jury its first inside picture of Manson's hippie-style clan, its genesis and wanderings. "Manson was never our leader," insisted red-haired Lynette Fromme, 22, an original and still loyal member of the "family," disputing state claims that Manson held dictatorial power over followers. "He would follow us," she said. "All he had to do in the whole world was see what we wanted and needed. He really cared for us." Miss Fromme, thin and freckle-faced, vividly described the Manson family travels in an old schoolbus, picking up runaway teen-agers along the way. "We were riding on the wind," she said. Miss Fromme, who camped outside the Hall of Justice during much of the seven-month-old trial, was brought to court from jail to be a defense witness. She was arrested in December and charged with conspiring to murder a former family member who, authorities said, was given an LSD-spiked hamburger to prevent her from testifying against Manson. The girl recovered and testified. Miss Fromme's testimony at the trial's penalty phase was part of the defense effort to persuade jurors to decree life imprisonment instead of execution for Manson and three women followers convicted last week of murder-conspiracy in the seven 1969 killings. Miss Fromme, daughter of an aeronautical engineer, said she grew up in a "typical middle-

Neenah Lass Told She Can't be Papergirl

MADISON — A 13-year-old Neenah girl's bid for feminine equality met a 3-2 defeat in a Wisconsin Senate committee Monday.

The committee on commerce, labor, taxation, insurance and banking voted against letting girls her age deliver newspapers.

Kathleen Safford, daughter of the Clark Saffords, 935 Bridgewood Drive, wanted to substitute for her brother, Craig, who delivers The Post-Crescent and Twin City News-Record on a south side Neenah route.

Edward Gauerke, Twin Cities circulation manager for the newspapers, informed her father that under present state law only boys 12 years old and older may work as newspaper carriers.

Both the newspaper and the parents of the girl would be subject to a fine for violating the law.

Kathleen's father decided the rule is discriminatory and went to former State Rep. David Martin of Neenah to try to do something about it.

Introduces Bill

Martin is no longer in the Assembly due to his defeat as Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, so Rep. Jack Steinhilber, R-Oshkosh, introduced the bill to change the regulation.

The Senate committee conducted a hearing on the bill Monday and rejected the amendment, on grounds that young girls would be subject to muggings and improper advances.

Sen. Ronald Parys, D-Milwaukee, and Roger Murphy, R-Waukesha, were most vocal opponents of the bill. "I can see where this is probably fine in a community like Neenah," Parys told Steinhilber, "but in a community like mine that is nothing but a jungle, it's not even safe for boys to deliver papers."

The Milwaukee lawmaker said the bill probably would be all right if the streets were safe or if newspapers billed customers directly. But he said he was concerned about newspapergirls being beaten and robbed of money they collected.

Steinhilber replied that street crimes are a problem of law enforcement not newspaper delivery. "The answer is not to put a law on the books against a peaceful pursuit," said Steinhilber, but to enforce laws against street crimes.

Large Backs Bill
Sen. Gerald Lorge, R-Bear Creek, committee chairman, said the law now is frequently violated. "When the boy comes home late, his sister takes the papers," Lorge and Sen. Milo Knutson, R-LaCrosse, voted in favor of the bill. Knutson, a radio newsman by profession, said he hadn't run into reports of attacks on newspaper carriers often as a newsman.

Kathleen and her parents were unable to be in Madison for the hearing, though Mrs. Safford said today they had been notified of it.

Mrs. William Bradford Smith, chairman of the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women, argued for passage, and 12-year-old Libby Kreutz of Madison and her mother appeared before the committee to urge approval.

Mrs. Kreutz had expected the outcome, though her daughter appeared disappointed. "When I saw the notice of the hearing in the paper," the mother said, "I said, 'All right, you want to see why you can't sell papers?'"

"Quite Excited"
Mrs. Safford said her daughter was "quite excited" that her bill was going before the committee.

She lives in a neighborhood where older girls have the babysitting jobs mostly sewed up, Mrs. Safford explained, so the ways Kathleen can earn spending money are limited.

"She'll be quite disappointed when she comes home tonight," her mother predicted. "But, you can't tell your children it's all right to break one law. We have to abide by it."

A educational television channel to serve the Fox Valley could be a reality in late summer due to the announcement today that matching federal funds for the project have been approved.

State officials earlier predicted that if the federal appropriation was approved by Feb. 15, the channel, No. 38, could begin broadcasting in September, becoming the first in a network of four for Wisconsin.

U. S. Rep. John Byrnes' office said today that the Office of Education of the U. S.

Department of Health, Education and Welfare had approved $386,057 for the $701,000 project. These funds will be combined with $315,000 the Wisconsin Building Commission set aside sometime ago.

Appleton was one of four sites named in the request last June by the state educational communications board for funding for the instructional television stations. However, Lee S. Frank, executive director of the board, said last November that Appleton was eliminated as a site possibility for many reasons, among which was that it's technically not feasible.

Instead, the channel's signals will be transmitted from an existing commercial television tower on Scray's Hill near De Pere. The expected broadcast radius will be about 50 miles.

However, location of the channel's studio has not been announced.

The federal grant will go to the communications board which will supervise the construction and operation of facilities.

Nitrates in Excessive Quantities Can be Dangerous

BY RAY PAGEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

GREEN BAY — Nitrates are a good thing, and highly essential, but in excessive quantities, they are bad.

In drinking water, they can cause illness and, rarely, death of human infants.

In forage, they can impair the health and sometimes kill farm animals.

These points were made here Tuesday afternoon at the opening session of a three-day conference on nitrates, phosphates and farm animal wastes.

Ecosystems

About 75 farmers, University Extension personnel and others were registered for the meeting at the Hotel Northland. Similar conferences viewing rural Wisconsin ecosystems are being held this week in Madison and Eau Claire.

"Use good judgment, adopt recommended procedures," was the advice on application of nitrogen fertilizers from Dr. D.

A Rohweder University of Wisconsin agronomist.

He pointed out that plants use nitrogen from the soil in the form of nitrates. Nitrogen is a chemical element, while nitrates are chemical compounds in various forms.

"Farmers are using more nitrogen to get high yields, so we need to know how plants and nitrogen react," Rohweder stressed. "Toxic conditions can build up as the use of fertilizer is increased."

Nutrient deficiencies drought, temperature, sunlight, plant damage and herbicides are environmental factors in the nitrate picture, according to Rohweder. He noted that concentrations can be relatively high in corn silage. They remain generally low in small grains and alfalfa cut after the early bud stage.

"Application of herbicides can increase the amount of nitrates in crops, but the result still may be favorable when you kill weeds that are high in nitrates," the agronomist said.

Sources of available nitrogen as a factor in the nitrate problem were identified by Dr. Leo M. Walsh, University of Wisconsin soil science professor. Among agricultural sources are organic matter in the soil, crop residues, manure, legumes and commercial fertilizer.

Precipitation

"Precipitation probably accounts for twice as much nitrogen as the amount that is applied through fertilizer annually," Walsh commented.

Named as non-agricultural sources were industry, domestic sewage, septic tanks, solid wastes, roadside erosion and blue-green algae which take nitrogen from the air. Walsh didn't regard lawn and garden fertilizer as much of a factor, but cautioned that the spreader shouldn't spill over on the sidewalk or driveway.

"Farmers should be more concerned in the future about soil and water conservation to prevent erosion and about handling manure," Walsh advised.

Surface Water

Despite what you may have read or seen on TV, surface water levels of nitrates are very low except in a few isolated instances. That was the claim of George Enfield, a soil specialist with the USDA in Washington.

A recent study showed that it gets back to the surface there has been no increase in recent years," he asserted.

"The nitrate situation in Wisconsin rivers is not too bad," he added, "but you will find it a little bit higher where you find the people."

Groundwater movements were discussed by Dr. A. Stephenson, a University of Wisconsin professor. He said 10 to 15 percent of all precipitation becomes groundwater and can bring nitrates with it when it gets back to the surface.

Park Sewage Solution To Await Cost Study

More specific cost estimates on a solution to the sewage problem in Plamann Park will be sought in further discussions with a Menasha consulting firm, the Outagamie County Board of public property and parks committee decided Tuesday.

McMahon Associates, Inc., last month had submitted preliminary cost estimates ranging from $30,000 to $180,000 for a number of long and short-term methods of handling the problem which has become increasingly critical as park use intensifies.

Among the solutions suggested by McMahon were connections with Appleton and Grand Chute sewerage systems and construction of a park sewage plant.

The county committee has met with Appleton and Grand Chute officials to discuss the sewage alternatives involving the two municipalities.

McMahon had informed the county that accurate cost figures would require detailed measurements, determination of alternate routes for locations of sewers and studies of soil conditions.

The committee agreed with Supv. Herman Rupp of Appleton who cautioned that since there is not yet a development plan for the park — including the 143 additional acres being acquired — permanent steps to handle the sewage problem there should not be taken immediately.

Planning, he said, should be done with "an eye to the future."

It was indicated that temporary measures may have to continue for up to five years. Last summer, temporary measures included pumping out septic tanks several times a week during periods of peak park use.

However, Supv. Nick Karras of Appleton warned that even continuation on a temporary solution basis will involve some expenditures.

He also noted that when permanent steps are taken, federal Land and Water Conservation funds might be available to help finance the cost of sewer work.

Rupp suggested that residents of the surrounding Apple Creek area be surveyed to determine what they think about becoming part of an areawide sewage system. Several homeowners in the park vicinity have experienced serious sewage problems which experts have stated is a result of the physical characteristics of the land there.

In addition to approving a motion approving another meeting with McMahon, the committee voted to install automatic shutoff valves on sinks and urinals in the park shelter houses.

The measures were among several suggested by Frank M. Charlesworth, county coordinator of public services to help relieve heavy use of the sewage facilities on a temporary basis.

statement but he said it came at a time when "the roof was falling in." Pfrang apparently was referring to turmoil within the agency that came to a head while Eggert was still on the job. The state presently is conducting an administrative review into the welfare agency.

"It's not entirely true today," Pfrang reflected on his earlier statement. "I might be interested."

That promoted Kaskew, a social worker in the Outagamie agency until about 1960 when he left for the Green County job to inform the board. "I might be interested too. It depends on the board."

Appleton Man Gets Sentence of 7 Years

A seven-year reformatory term was given Tuesday to a young Appleton man convicted of 25 offenses, all but two of them felonies.

Daniel Carpenter, 23, of 744 E. Franklin St., was sentenced to the Green Bay reformatory by Outagamie County Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Branch 2. The term includes two years previously stayed for burglary conviction in August.

Carpenter originally was charged with a safe burglary at the Fox Tractor-Farm Division of Koehring Co., 3800 W. Wisconsin Ave., last Nov. 29. County police discovered the break-in, in progress, after being alerted by an alarm. A jury delivered a guilty verdict the morning after a daylong trial on Jan. 11.

The 24 other counts to which Carpenter pleaded guilty Tuesday were 21 burglaries, one attempted burglary and two misdemeanor thefts. The offenses had been committed between May 29, 1968 and Nov. 29, 1970. Three charges were consolidated from Winnebago and Brown counties.

Authorities said the amount of cash stolen during the break-ins was about $2,000, with damages resulting from forced entries and other acts totaling $500. The largest take was at the former Bernie Canney Ford in De Pere where Carpenter removed about $1,500 from a safe he cracked.

R. Thomas Cane, assistant district attorney, told the court that Carpenter volunteered information on the other crimes to avoid being recharged upon release should he be imprisoned. This occurred just after the jury convicted him, Cane explained.

Cane said he told Carpenter that should he admit other offenses, the district attorney's office would recommend a concurrent sentence to that imposed for the Fox Tractor burglary.

In his recommendation Tuesday to Schaefer, Cane noted that Carpenter, who previously was placed on two years' probation Aug. 11 for another burglary instead of getting a reformatory sentence then, was "given a break." "But then," Cane admonished, "the man goes out a few months later and commits another burglary."

Schaefer, taking that and defense statements into consideration levied a five-year sentence to the reformatory on the Fox Tractor break-in, to run consecutive to the two-year term that was earlier stayed. Since Carpenter's probation was revoked, the imposition of the previous disposition goes into effect automatically.

On the additional convictions, Schaefer directed five-year terms to run concurrently. One year in the county jail for the two misdemeanor thefts also was made concurrent to the others.

A 21-year-old Appleton man presently at the Central State Hospital on a court-ordered examination awaits a preliminary hearing for his alleged part in the Fox Tractor burglary. He is James Salorus, 1209 N. Morrison St.

UWGB Initiates Environmental Action Month

GREEN BAY — Through the initiative of concerned students at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, April 1971 has been declared Wisconsin Environmental Action Month.

A proclamation signed Jan. 20 by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey sets aside the month for the promotion of "an understanding of the environmental problem, an exchange of information, general citizen participation, and constant concern and continued involvement in attempts to resolve the environmental crisis."

Chairman of the environmental action committee of the UWGB United Student Government is sophomore Nancy Jochman, who is planning activities for February and March culminating in a series of special programs in April.

A lecture April 29 on the UWGB campus by Stewart Udall, former secretary of the Interior, will coincide with the end of Environmental Action Month.

Safety Building Gets State OK

Preliminary approval has been received from the State Industrial Commission for the Outagamie County Safety Building.

Eugene Boldt of Sauter Sea-boine Durval and Pavner architects, told the county board's special building committee Tuesday night that they were well into the working drawings for the building and they would be ready for bidding about April 15.

Supv. Jerome Hiler, Appleton committee chairman, indicated preliminary bonding resolutions may be submitted to the county board Tuesday.

Boldt said the only unsettled issue with the industrial commission is over the amount of window space in the third floor. Huber Law, prisoner dormitories. The industrial commission wants more window space.

than provided in the plans, Boldt said.

He added they plan to appeal the commission's objections on the grounds the building will be in conditioned and will have an emergency power system in the event of power failure.

Ben Seaborne said a building budget is being prepared for the county and assured the committee they are sticking to the $2 million price. "I feel those figures are locked in," Seaborne said.

He added the only area where the cost was not fixed was in building equipment. The county, he said, would have to decide what is wanted in the building.

Seaborne said a meeting was held with Motorola Corp. which installed the existing communications system in the sheriff's department and assurance was given that the present system can simply be expanded for the new building.

He said they were also looking into television as a means of monitoring remote areas.

The committee gave the architects the go-ahead for barement plans without provisions for emergency government space. County officials had been looking into the possibility of participating federal funds for any area used by emergency government. "There is no money available," Hiler said.

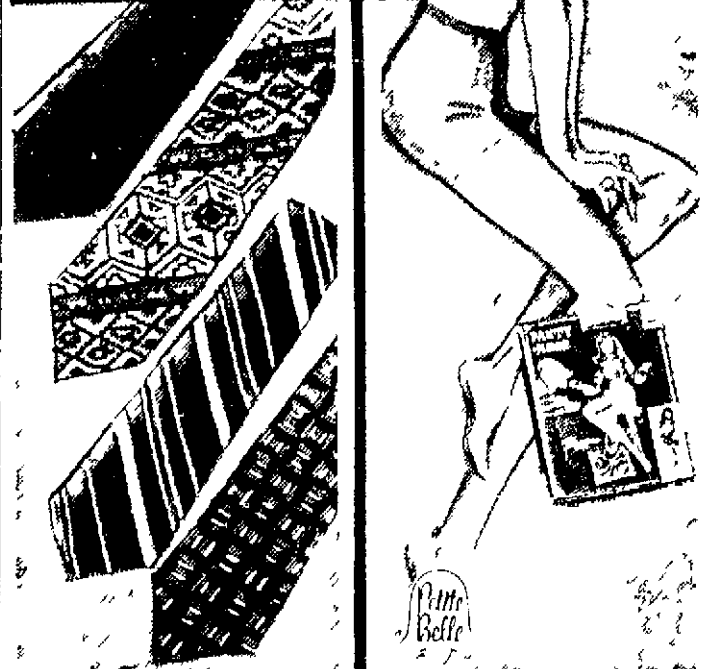

An area 80 feet by 90 feet will be left undeveloped for future expansion.

Boldt said first floor plans have been reviewed several times with Sheriff Calvin Spice, Judge Nick Schaefer and District Attorney James Long and are nearly complete.

A smoke odor in Marian Gifts and Cards store, 125 W. College Ave. brought the Appleton Fire Department late Tuesday afternoon. Officials traced the smell to a fluorescent light ballast.

Lawrence Opera Group Proves its Existence

Three Full-House Audiences Applaud Students' Successful Operatic Venture

BY LILLIAN MACKESY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

John Koopman and his Lawrence Opera Theatre simply have to do something about their performances — they must extend their runs to bring pleasure to more people.

The two comic opera gems they gave last week were just what the three nights of audiences wanted. At least, that's what their enthusiastic applause indicated. All performances were sold out, so many people were disappointed they couldn't get tickets. And this on three of the coldest January nights of the year.

Besides, with all that talent and hard work on the part of onstage and backstage workers these students should have the excitement of a longer run.

Farce Intact

The threesome in the opera-buffa "The Maid-Mistress" by Giovanni Pergolesi were superb in pace, acting and the even texture of the farcical quality. They kept it opera-buffa all the way, which is a difficult thing to do when singing combines with the spoken line. Thomas Herman made an excellent Uberto, with Edward Truettner having to rely on his gestures and body reactions to portray the mule servant, but he pulled it off nicely.

Serpina, in the person of Susan Noffe, delighted the audiences as she alternated between the coquettish schemer (with the audience on her side) and the sad, sad maid about to leave her master. Of course, the music lines helped, but Sue was adept at handling them besides having a pleasing voice.

Brazeau Well Cast

At first, the broad, earthy comedy of the weeping mourners of old Buoso Donati as he lay dying seemed a bit overdone until the plot of Giacomo Puccini's comic opera "Gianni Schicchi" got underway. The relatives, greedy for the old man's properties, made their point effectively, almost as a moving, unified chorus. The smaller roles were well taken and the two young lovers, Jean Nocerini as Lauretta and Steve Johnson as Rinuccio, made their roman-

Don't Miss 'The Price' by Arthur Miller

BY TV SCOUT

6:30-8 — Channel 5 — Hallmark Hall of Fame, which has received 33 Emmy Awards over the years, looks like a sure bet to win another one for tonight's version of Arthur Miller's "The Price." George C. Scott, recently named Best Actor by the New York Film Critics for his work in "Patton," stars with his wife, Colleen Dewhurst, and Barry Sullivan and David Burns in the story of a conflict between two estranged brothers, a policeman and a wealthy surgeon, who meet after a 16 year separation to dispose of the furniture left by their deceased father. Scott plays the policeman with Sullivan as the surgeon. Burns recreates his Broadway role as the furniture dealer with Miss Dewhurst as the policeman's wife (type casting?). The reunion leads to bitter debate about the behavior of the brothers toward their father. David Susskind produced this powerful drama (which was filmed in London) with Fielder Cook directing. To Your Good Health Not Very Much Known About 'French Polio'

BY G. C. THOSTESON, M. D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me something about Guillain-Barre syndrome. I think it is sometimes called French polio. I would like to know its cause, symptoms, and chances of recovery. — Mrs. W. J. G.

Dr. Thosteson

Everybody would like to know the cause, including me. This isn't a particularly prevalent disorder, but it keeps cropping up here and there, so the average person, when he first experiences it or observes it, feels completely baffled.

So, beyond a certain point, does a doctor when he tries to explain it.

It is a disorder of the nervous system which results in weakness and paralysis of the extremities.

The patient usually (two-thirds of cases) has a period of vague illness for from one to three weeks before the paralysis begins to appear. Usually there's some fever but not particularly high.

Again, the patient may also be ill with some other condition. Or there may be no signs leading up to the attack.

The weakness starts in the legs, spreads upward on both sides to trunk and arms, but the face usually is not affected.

There's nothing much to do in the way of treating it except to bolster the patient's general health by whatever means is possible.

Chances of recovery, however, are good, although there may be some residual muscle weakness.

There's a notion that a virus plays some part in the disease, but to the best of my knowledge this never has been pinned down specifically.

There are other abstruse names for the condition, more unpronounceable than Guillain-Barre (Gho-YAN Bar-RAY) but I don't think I've ever heard it called "French polio."

The condition was named after two French neurologists. The performance is one of who first described it. But it is not polio, and should not be confused with it. Polio must be months ago I had a complete hysterectomy because of fibroid tumors. Prior to the operation I had a bad discharge with offensive odor. After surgery the discharge cleared up, but four months later it started again, sometimes pink, most of the time yellowish.

I am concerned because women I know who have had hysterectomies do not have a discharge. — Mrs. R. B.

Such a heavy discharge after a hysterectomy is not normal. It suggests an infection, perhaps in the vagina, or in the area of the operation. In any event, it deserves investigation to establish the source, so treatment of the infection can be started.

Emphysema can be controlled. To learn how to live with this serious lung disease, write to Dr. Thosteson in care of the Post-Crescent, requesting a copy of the booklet, "How To Control Emphysema," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 20 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Cocaine is a narcotic. It should be used for pain and not as a sleeping potion.

Judging by the small amount she is using, I would not think she had become addicted, but she certainly has acquired a habit—and she ought to break it. Unless her doctor has some reason which is not apparent in your brief letter.

Incidentally, where is she getting this cocaine? Did a doctor prescribe it? It should be used under a physician's control.

Fortunately cocaine does not usually lead to addiction, as other narcotics do, but overuse can do so. Thus for a limited time, to control pain, cocaine is useful and not harmful, but continued use is another kettle of fish.

Rules to Guide You In Buying Mobile Home

BY SYLVIA PORTER

"How do you find a really good mobile home?" is typical of the mass of questions I've received in response to my recent columns on this booming segment of the housing industry. "How do you go about choosing a mobile home site? How do you shop?"

The interest in my mobile home reports has astounded me — but it really shouldn't have. For by the end of this decade, an estimated 13 to 14,000,000 of you will be living in mobile homes or modular housing units. Behind the developing explosion are:

— The surge in young married Americans, the World War II babies now setting up households of their own on modest budgets.

— The desperate shortage of reasonably priced conventional housing. To meet our real total housing needs — projected at 26,000,000 units during this decade, including about 500,000 a year for low-middle income families — we would have to produce double the number of houses and apartments we are now building.

— The fact that the average cost of mobile homes today is a little more than $6,000 fully furnished, or less than one-fourth the amount being paid for the average unfurnished conventional home.

— The soaring costs of a conventional homebuilding site, making mobile homes even more financially attractive.

— The continuing quest for the convenience of easy maintenance both inside and outside our homes. Today's mobile homes are fitted with the most modern, easily cleanable surfaces and outside walls which may be periodically washed instead of painted.

So millions of you will be heading for this market in the next few years. Here, therefore, are rules to guide you in shopping.

(1) Choose your dealer with the utmost care, for he may not only be selling you a home but also be arranging your financing terms. Typically, the dealer from whom you buy a mobile home then sells the loan contract to a bank or finance company. Also, he is the sole person responsible for honoring the warranty or helping you with repairs.

(2) Do not fail to check the reputation of any dealer with local banks and the Better Business Bureau. Another guide might be whether the dealer belongs to the Mobile Housing Association of America in Chicago. You might also go to a nearby mobile home park, simply knock on a few doors of homes which attract you and ask the occupants about the dealer from whom they bought.

(3) Compare what is and is not included in the purchase price. Normally, new mobile homes today are sold complete with kitchen range, refrigerator, water heater, furniture, draperies, carpeting and lamps — and furnace. Normally also, you pay extra for such optional equipment as air conditioning, dishwasher, garbage disposals, clothes washers and dryers, screen and storm windows, shutters.

(4) Compare the amount of living and storage space offered, an area of major shortcomings and a key point of comparisons.

(5) Look for the "MHMA-TCA" seals (Mobile Homes Manufacturers Assn.-Trailer Coach Assn.) near the doorways which tell you whether the home meets certain basic standards adopted by the American National Standards Institute in New York.

(6) Ask the dealer to show you the "Official Mobile Home Market Report," the "Blue Book" of Mobile Homes published and updated every four months by the Judy Burner Publishing Co., of Chicago. This will help you compare current retail prices for all major models.

(7) Get and compare all the facts on financing terms, including the annual interest rate, total dollar finance charge over life of the loan, amount of down payment, repayment period, all miscellaneous costs. Compare the total finance charge on each home. Find out if you qualify for a lower cost mortgage insured by the VA or FHA.

(8) And before you buy, consider alternatives in today's bargain-priced housing: prefabricated permanent homes, modular units, city houses and apartments being gutted and instantly fitted with entire new "packaged" interiors, publicly subsidized low-cost housing.

Police and Fire Beat

A fine of $25 and costs, or six days in the Outagamie County jail, was imposed Monday on William W. Baitinger, 34, for passing a worthless check Baitinger, route 2, New London, pleaded guilty to the Sept. 28, 1970 count in front of County Judge Nick F. Schaefer. The bogus $35 check, was issued at Thurks Restaurant in Sugarbush and drawn on the Hortonville office of Appleton State Bank.

A cardboard box, which ignited Monday afternoon near a basement incinerator, sent the Appleton Fire Department to the home of Richard Fredericks, 806 S. Summit St. Officials reported some fire damage to a rug in the basement.

KAUKAUNA — Firemen were called about 7:15 a.m. Sunday to the Lawrence Radloff residence, 401 E. 17th St., to clear the house of smoke resulting from a motor burning out on the furnace. A smoke ejector was used and the owner advised to call a repairman.

Byrd Likely to Lead Fight In Senate for SST Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whention subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee, the panel that considers SST funds. Logically, this new assignment would throw Byrd, a supporter of the project, the job of trying to push the SST through the Senate. This means that in the first major battle since becoming whip, Byrd probably will find himself opposing most of his fellow Democrats, including Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield.

The West Virginian, who topped Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts to become party whip last month, is the new chairman of the transportation subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee.

campaign of spreading news about optimism is not helping to find a peaceful solution." Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad told Egyptian newsmen.

Likely to Continue

Despite the official coolness to extension of the cease-fire, many observers in the Middle East feel that the truce will continue on an unofficial day-to-day basis.

The Israelis have repeatedly pledged not to fire first, and the Foreign Ministry in Jerusalem declared Tuesday it is willing to go along with Thant's appeal on the cease-fire if Egypt reciprocates.

But sources in Jerusalem said the Israeli government viewed accusations made public by Egypt Tuesday as a deliberate attempt to sabotage the peace talks. A memorandum handed to Jarring on Monday declared that Israel is refusing to comply with provisions of the Security Council resolution of Nov. 22, 1967 by its failure to withdraw from territory it captured in the 1967 war. The note urged the Security Council to force compliance to help Jarring work out an agreement.

Jarring Message

The Cairo newspaper Al-Ahram reported today that Secretary of State William P. Rogers, who first proposed the cease-fire last summer to produce a climate conducive to negotiations, has sent another message to Riad explaining "America's point of view regarding the present situation." It was Rogers' third message in two weeks to Egypt.

On the Suez and the Jordanian fronts, preparations continued Tuesday for an end to the cease-fire.

After another day of buildups on both sides of the canal, loudspeakers blared propaganda from the Egyptian side during the night, military sources said.

Amman Radio announced that Jordan's 55,000-man army was on "maximum alert" and that King Hussein's brother, Prince Hassan, supervised tank maneuvers at an undisclosed location. Officials said troops and armor have been moving toward the Jordan River cease-fire line since Saturday.

Plane Destroyed, Indians in Uproar

NEW DELHI (AP) — Several hundred Indians stoned the Pakistan High Commission building today in protest against the destruction of an Indian airliner by Kashmiri hijackers in West Pakistan.

In Jammu, the winter capital of Kashmir State, a protest closed all shops and schools.

A Pakistani spokesman said several members of the High Commission staff were hurt but none seriously. Police drove the demonstrators away with tear gas.

India banned flights by Pakistani military planes over its territory in retaliation for the destruction of the airliner.

Negotiated Release
Pakistan's Foreign Office de-plored the firing of the $1.14 million aircraft at Lahore airport Tuesday night as it was negotiating for its release and return to India.

India claimed Pakistan's military government could have prevented the destruction of the Fokker Friendship F27, which two young Kashmiris diverted to Lahore Saturday from a domestic flight over Kashmir. The other 26 passengers and four crew members returned to India by road Monday.

The incident triggered a new crisis in relations between India and Pakistan, which have fought two wars over Kashmir. The ban on Pakistani military flights further isolates the two parts of Pakistan, separated by 1,000 miles of Indian territory, but apparently civilian aircraft were not affected.

Freedom Fighters
The hijackers, who occupied the plane until they destroyed it with incendiary devices, had said they would blow it up if the Indian government did not release 36 imprisoned Kashmiri "freedom fighters."

Maqbool Ahmed Butt, black-bettered leader of the Kashmiri Liberation Front, said the hijackers "had no alternative" because the Pakistanis planned to remove them from the plane Monday night.

Butt, who flew to Lahore over the weekend to advise the hijackers, identified them as Ashraf Qureshi, 21, and Mohammed Hashem, 20. He said they jumped from the plane after the flames took hold.

Both were under guard in a military hospital in Lahore. Qureshi was seriously injured in the blast and was being given oxygen. Butt said. He said the other youth suffered minor injuries.

Followers Cheered
Two dozen of Butt's followers danced and cheered as the airliner burned.

Butt said the object of the plane seizure was to focus world attention on the Kashmir dispute which has poisoned relations between the two countries since the 1947 partition of British India.

Although the majority of the Kashmiris are Moslems, the Hindu maharaja of the Himalayan state threw in with India after independence. In their first war, in 1948, the two countries each seized part of the state, but India got the most important part, the Vale of Kashmir. Butt's organization seeks independence for Kashmir.

Mitchell said they found only one washer floating about in the weightless cabin. "A lot of credit goes to the ground checkout crew, because the spacecraft is really clean," Mitchell said.

Before Camera
For TV Roosa held up a patch which had been smuggled into the spaceship before launch by the backup crew. It was a take-off on the Apollo 14 emblem, which shows an astronaut pin heading for the moon on a comet tail. The backup crew's patch has two comic characters, a roadrunner and a coyote, in chase scene between earth and moon, topped by the words "Beep, Beep."

After a day in orbit, in which the combined ships will dip to within 11.5 miles of the surface, Shepard and Mitchell once again transfer into Anares, separate and make the diving descent to the moon, skimming over 600-foot-high ridges, craters and mammoth boulders to touch down in the Fra Mauro highlands near the Ocean of Storms.

Scheduled landing time is 3:16 a.m. Friday. Within hours, Shepard and Mitchell are to become the fifth and sixth humans, all American, to set foot on the moon. With television relaying his step to the surface, Shepard is to be first down the ladder at 7:53 a.m.

During 34 hours on the moon, the astronauts plan two outside excursions, each lasting four to five hours.

Law Enforcement Aid Administration Probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A to an amount 27 times larger congressional subcommittee is comprehensive law enforcement making quiet inquiries into the financial auditing of the Law LEAA, millions of dollars in grants and contracts have been issued and the employment roles of LEAA have burgeoned.

The first public indication of the probe came Tuesday when Rep. Dante B. Fascell told the House that LEAA's audit division is "woefully undermanned."

The Florida Democrat, who is chairman of a House Government Operations subcommittee, also criticized President Nixon for failure to fill the post of LEAA administrator, vacant since June 1.

Charles Rogovin resigned then in protest over the three-headed administrative structure of the agency. Congress recently placed all administrative powers in the hands of the administrator.

Fascell said that during the period the post has been vacant, "Congress has increased the authorized funds for LEAA in 1973, 1974 and 1975."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

by
IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

The Fairy Godmother can sometimes grant our wishes. We must, however, be careful not to ask for too much. Small wishes are easier to grant than large ones—even for Fairy Godmothers.

Observe the difference in the wishes made by two different Wests in defense of today's game contract.

The bidding was uneventful, and North-South reached the reasonable game contract in hearts.

Our first defender's opening lead was the king of diamonds. He followed with his ace, and when this held the trick, he made his wish. Since he had a third trick in the trump ace, he wished for a trick in spades to set the contract. West led a spade in the. However, declarer won with hopes that East could win. However, declarer won with dummy's queen. Declarer played trumps and had no trouble scoring 10 tricks and his contract. He lost only two diamonds and one heart.

When the hand was defended by George Healy, editor of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, he made a much smaller wish.

A look at dummy and a review of the bidding made it clear that a wish for East to have the spade ace was asking too much. Instead, Healy wished for partner to have either the jack or the 10 of hearts. Certainly a reason-

Healy also started with the king and ace of diamonds. At trick three, he continued with a third diamond! He knew this would afford declarer a sluff and ruff. He also knew that East held no high cards and a sluff and ruff wasn't going to give declarer anything he did not already have. Declarer ruffed the third diamond in dummy and discarded a club. A heart was led from dummy, declarer played the jack and Healy won his ace. He continued with a fourth round of diamonds and declarer's game was cooked when East ruffed with the 10.

Declarer had no choice and overruffed. This promoted Healy's trump nine to a sure trick and the contract was defeated.

Like Healy, if you learn to keep your wishes within reason, your Fairy Godmother should be able to grant a few of them.

It's Really an Expression of Confidence

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like to comment in your answer to "Alice's Restaurant." The gal was furious because her husband kept bringing unexpected guests home to dinner. (Last time he caught her with weiners and sauerkraut.)

Alice should be pleased that her husband is so proud of his home that he feels comfortable enough to do this. And he must have a great deal of confidence in his wife. Some men would be scared to death of what they might find if they surprised the little woman with unexpected company.

I can tell you from experience that our most interesting evenings have been the times my husband brought home a "surprise" guest to share a casserole of tuna, or a batch of French toast — and, yes, even meatloaf. Friendly atmosphere and stimulating conversation mean more than fancy china and sirloin steak. To a traveling man who is away from his family, any home-cooked meal among friends is better than a gourmet dinner at a cafe — alone. — No Notice Nora

Landers

Dear Nora: I am a rapid-scan reader and the first word of your letter that caught my eye was meatloaf. Needless to say I was shook. I was delighted, however, your letter dealt with another topic. I hope every wife who gripes about her husband bringing home an unexpected dinner guest will see your letter and learn from it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago my sister married a homosexual. In less than a month he told Myra he had married only for "respectability." From that day on he rejected her. Last month he started divorce proceedings. Myra is fighting the divorce. This should tell you right away that she is a nut.

Myra has upset the entire family because of her behavior. She rattles on and on about her marvelous husband, how well he treats her and how thoughtful he is. It's enough to make a person throw up.

A few weeks ago Myra began to have some physical problems (stomach pains and headaches.) Her internist sent her to a psychiatrist. I hope he will help her. In the meantime, what can I do about this balmy girl who is making such a big fool of herself? — Rx-II

Dear Rx: Nothing. But you can do something for yourself. Separate yourself from Myra's problem. She sounds like a sick cookie who needs understanding, not criticism.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I couldn't resist writing in the hope that I might help the woman who is driving herself crazy about her daughter's short lifetime. It seems the mother became interested in palmistry and began to read the palms of her friends and relatives. She became petrified when she discovered that her youngest child had a lifetime about one fifth the length of a normal life span.

When I was a child my mother had a palm reader come to our home. The woman told my mother that she would not live to see her 51st birthday. I was only seven years old at the time and my mother was 47. Every night for three wretched years I went to sleep on a wet pillow I lived in constant fear that my mother would die. Only when Mother reached her 51st birthday did I shake the terrible anxiety. My mother died four years ago at the age of 91. Please print this letter for Mrs. L.R. because I know so well what she is going through — Been There, Too

Dear B e e j: Hundreds wrote to relate similar experiences. Thank you all. Palmistry is purely superstition, of course. I, too, hope the worried mother sees your letter.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents, if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged by Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Bus Starts Up, Runs Itself . . . Into Ditch

THE DALLES, Ore. (AP) — An unattended school bus took a spin around The Dalles High School parking lot recently, scattering numerous students before tumbling down a 20-foot embankment.

No injuries were reported. School maintenance officials said apparently electrical shorts in switches or wiring started the engine.

After the bus went over the embankment, it stalled and started again. An employee finally ripped loose some wiring in the engine to stop it.

Cranberry Cakes

Raspberry Cheesecake

Straight To The Heart

A little sweetness and kindness is not amiss these days of alternating frigid air and snowstorms. With Valentine's Day just ahead it's a good time for it. Desserts that go "straight to the heart" in sentimental fashion will delight the family. They'll also lift the spirits of club friends or Valentine party guests.

A Frosted Cranberry Cake that literally spells out "LOVE" goes beautifully with a sparkling drink called Cranberry Sangria. These two make an excellent choice for party serving.

Then there's the recipe for a sparkling Raspberry Glazed Cheese Torte, an attractive coffee-mate for a Valentine happening, whether it's at the family dinner table or after the young fry are in bed. Luscious whole raspberries (the frozen kind are available now) are placed on top of a creamy cheese cake that most families in this area like so well. The torte is gelatin based and made with creamy cottage cheese. Before serving, the torte is garnished with whipped cream, piped on in heart shape.

Another beautiful dessert is the oversized meringue heart, filled with ice cream, then topped with a pineapple cherry sauce. Pineapple slices edge the meringue on the inside to make it picture-pretty.

A bright idea that will please the youngsters is to tuck a Valentine heart snack into their school lunches. Valentine treats are made easily when those handy little jars of puddings and fruits are used. They may be packed in the lunchbox as is, only decorated with a valentine ribbon or motif. Also, the pudding, fruit or dessert choice may be used to fill a heart-shaped tart shell.

So, for a frosted cranberry cake that spells out LOVE, or a snack pack made into a Valentine tart, or a gorgeous Valentine meringue or special cheesecake, simply follow these HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY recipes.

LOVE CAKE

- 1 pkg. yellow cake mix
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup water
- 1 can (8 ounces) jellied cranberry sauce, diced
- Grated rind of 1 orange
- 1/2 cup finely chopped pecans
- 1 pkg. fluffy white frosting mix
- 1/2 cup cranberry juice cocktail, heated to boiling Colored sprinkles

Combine cake mix, eggs and water. Beat until smooth and fluffy. Fold in cranberry sauce, orange rind and pecans. Pour batter into a greased and floured 9x13x2 inch pan. Bake in preheated, 350 degree oven for 35 to 40 minutes, or until firm to the touch. Remove from pan and cool on a rack.

Prepare frosting mix according to package directions using cranberry juice in place of water.

With a sharp knife cut cooled cake crosswise into two 6x9-inch halves. To make the letter "O" cut a 6-inch square from one of the halves. Trim square into a 6-inch round. Cut a 2-inch diameter round hole in center of cake.

Cut remaining cake half in six 2x4-inch rectangular pieces. Use these cake pieces to form letters "L," "V" and "E."

Place each cake letter on a doily covered plate. Carefully frost cake letters on top and sides. Sprinkle tops of cakes with colored sprinkles.

NOTE: Serve leftover cake pieces topped with vanilla pudding for an extra dessert.

CRANBERRY SANGRIA

- 2 quarts cranberry juice cocktail,

- chilled
- 1 bottle (4/5 quart) port wine, chilled
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1 quart club soda, chilled
- Thin slices apple, orange, lemon

Combine all ingredients except soda and sliced fruit. Chill. When ready to serve pour into a pitcher and add soda and ice cubes. Decorate, if desired, with slices of apples, oranges and lemons.

PINEAPPLE HEART MERINGUE

- 3 egg whites
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup sugar

- 1 (8 1/4-ounce) can crushed pineapple

- 1 (8 1/2-ounce) can pitted dark sweet cherries

- 1 tablespoon sugar

- 1 tablespoon cornstarch

- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

- 1 teaspoon vanilla

- 1/2 teaspoon almond extract

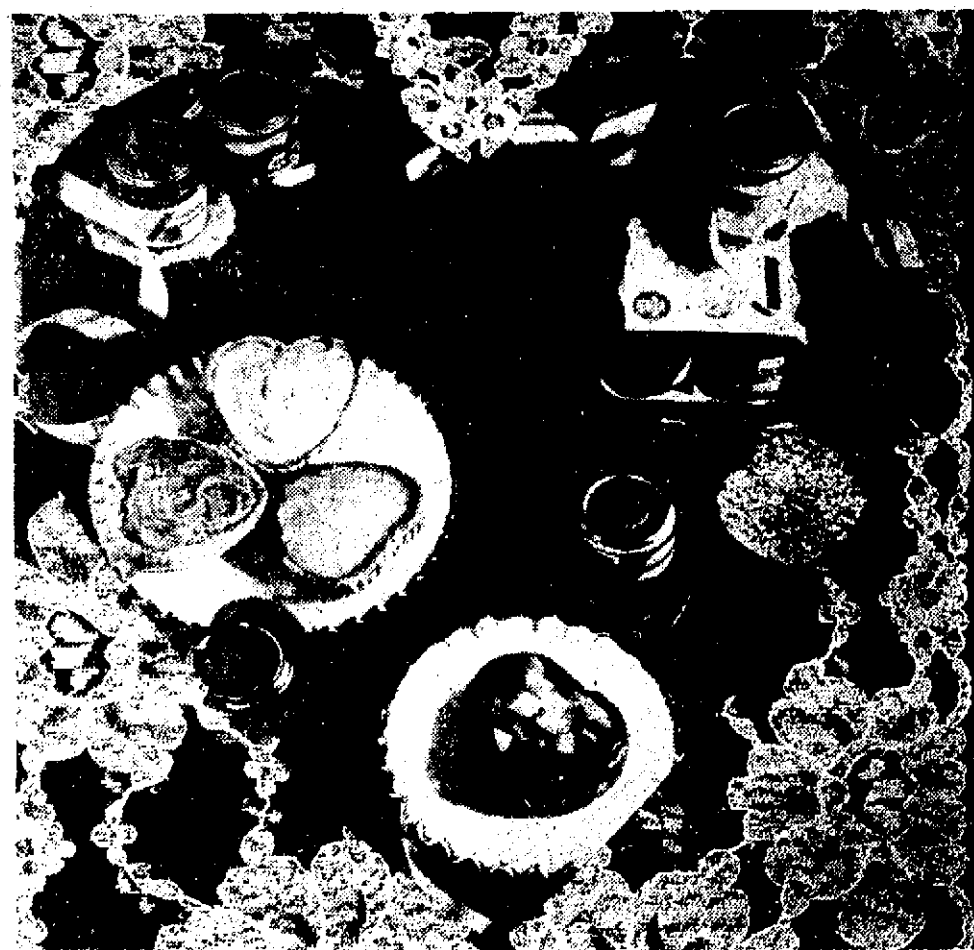

- 1/4 teaspoon red food coloring

- 1 quart vanilla ice cream

- 1 can pineapple slices

- Place a piece of aluminum

- Turn to Page 2, Col. 4

Designer Sees Handwriting, Drops High Priced Collection

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Designer Richard Tam says he is dropping his expensive lines because high-priced fashions just don't seem appropriate in these days of ghetto poverty.

Instead, the 30-year-old Chinese-American designer said, he will concentrate on his moderate-priced boutique collection.

"I can see the handwriting on the wall, and I want to be the first, not the last, couture designer to make the change," he said in an interview.

In seven years of designing, Tam said, he has never lost money on his high-priced line, in which the cheapest dress sells for $395. Nevertheless, he said, it's time for a change.

"For the last couple of years, I've been looking at these women buying $1,000 dresses while blacks were rioting in the ghettos," he said.

They were acting like so many Marie Antoinettes. These people are just asking to have their heads chopped off."

Tam added, "Expensive clothes involve the kind of handwork that no one seems to appreciate any more.

"Handcrafts are fading except for the highly personal things that the kids are doing."

Tam said his new collection would be priced at $100 to $395.

"The new clothes will be just as pretty as the old ones, they'll be made of top-quality fabrics, but they just won't have the meticulous construction that the old ones did," he said. "There will be more machine work instead of all that handwork."

"I'm not going to try to make hippie clothes. The taste level won't change. I will make simple, well-cut clothes for a woman who feels like a woman."

"It won't be funky. Funky clothes are a fad. There will be a return to the classic because older people look ridiculous in all that stuff."

"I saw a 65-year-old woman in Palm Beach last week wearing multicolored embroidered boots, a leather skirt and a bullet belt, and the sight of her just made you hate every fad."

Timely Innovation For the Bathroom

Finding it hard to get places on time lately? One good remedy could be the bathroom clock. With it, there's little excuse for "not knowing the time of day."

"Time-conscious people have probably kept clocks in their bathrooms for years," admits Mary Ann Wills, decorating consultant for Arabesque of Traverse City, Mich. "But the idea of a clock created expressly for the bath or powder room is comparatively new."

The company has given the idea expression in seven different styles, she noted. And for each of the petite, battery-powered wall clocks, there are design-coordinated towel rings to "add or not to add" for a total ensemble look.

Even more practical — and certainly more decorative — than a waterproof watch to wear in the shower, the new bath-or-boudoir clocks will run for 30 months or more on a single 1.5-volt flashlight battery. That means they can hang high over a mirror or window, if no other wall space is available.

"A pretty clock with matching towel rings makes timely good sense for many gift occasions, including wedding anniversaries and Mother's Day."

Food Surprises for Valentine's Day

foil on a baking sheet and outline a 9-inch heart on it. Preheat oven to 275 degrees.

Have egg whites at room temperature.

Add salt to egg whites and beat to stiff peaks. Gradually beat in one cup of sugar, about 2 tablespoons at a time, and beat for 2 minutes after each addition. Spread enough meringue mixture over bottom of heart-shaped pattern to form about half-inch thickness. With remaining meringue, build up the sides of heart to form a shell. Bake for 45 minutes. Reduce heat to 250 degrees and continue to bake for 15 minutes longer. Allow shell to cool completely before removing from foil.

Combine undrained crushed pineapple and cherries in saucepan. Mix together one tablespoon sugar and cornstarch; stir into fruits. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens. Remove from heat. Stir in lemon juice, vanilla and almond extracts and red food coloring. Cool.

For serving, place meringue shell on serving plate. Fill with firm vanilla ice cream. Drain pineapple slices well and cut into halves. Arrange pineapple halves over the ice cream around edge of meringue shell. Spoon half the sauce over ice cream and pass remainder. Recipe makes about eight servings.

Soften gelatin in water; heat slowly to dissolve. Add sugar, lemon peel and juice, cottage cheese and salt. Chill until syrupy. Fold in whipped cream.

Sprinkle bottom of buttered 7-inch spring form pan with almonds, reserving a few for sides of torte. Pour in cheese mixture. Chill until firm. Arrange raspberries over top of torte. Cover with glaze. Chill until firm. Remove sides of pan. Cover sides of torte with reserved slivered almonds. Recipe makes about eight servings.

RASPBERRY GLAZE

4 teaspoons cornstarch

3 tablespoons sugar

$\frac{1}{4}$ cup reserved raspberry juice

$\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon almond extract

Combine cornstarch and sugar. Slowly stir in reserved raspberry syrup from torte portion of recipe. Cook over medium heat until thick and clear, stirring constantly. Stir in almond extract. Cool to room temperature before spreading over raspberries on top of torte.

and work in flour until all ingredients are combined. Chill dough about half-hour. Roll dough between sheets of waxed paper, $\frac{1}{4}$ inch thick.

Cut out 12 heart-shaped cookies, about 3 inches across. Bake on ungreased cookie sheets in preheated, 350 degree oven for about 10 minutes. Cool completely on racks.

Top six cookies with 2 tablespoons each diced peaches or fruit cup. Spread six cookies with 2 tablespoons each pudding, and place each one over a fruit-topped cookie. Top each shortcake with 2 tablespoons more fruit.

VALENTINE TARTS

1 pkg. pie crust mix

1 egg
1 tablespoon water snack jars of pudding vanilla, butterscotch, cherry vanilla, lemon chocolate or chocolate fudge pudding

Combine pie crust mix with egg and just enough water for pastry to hold together. Roll out thin and cut into circles one inch larger than diameter of tart pans being used. Fit dough into pans and prick thoroughly with a fork. Bake in preheated, 425 degree oven 10 to 12 minutes or until pale gold. Cool before removing from pans.

Fill each tart shell with one jar of favorite flavor pudding. Recipe makes about 12 tarts.

Marketing Memo

Temperature Drop Makes Prices Go Up

The January weather situation is having an effect on meat prices, says Rosemary Stare, consumer marketing specialist at the University of Wisconsin.

Beef is higher than a week earlier. Chuck cuts, ground beef and beef liver are the best values.

Although pork also has edged upward, it offers the most economy. Pork loins are higher, but still are considered reasonable. Ham and bacon show little or no change and are among the good meat buys.

Poultry products are holding at reasonable levels. Fryer supplies are expected to be large through February. Eggs are attractive buys, prices are considerably below a year ago. The larger size eggs usually are the better value this time of year. However, some markets have attractive prices for medium-sized eggs.

Citrus Fruits
There was a 10-day embargo on Florida citrus fruits while freeze damage was being assessed. Preliminary reports on damage varied from slight to severe. Because the crop this year was to be much larger than normal, even with some crop loss, we should have adequate citrus supplies.

Most of the favorite citrus items will be in the food market, but prices are likely to be a little higher than last week.

Vegetables should not show any marked price changes. Cabbage, carrots, potatoes and onions are among the more reasonable fresh vegetables. Lettuce is moderately priced. Cucumbers and green peppers are lower priced than they were a year ago.

Other Foods
Cool weather in Mexico and Florida is holding back the ripening process of tomatoes. Supplies should be quite good as warmer weather moves in for them to ripen.

Supplies of Anjou pears and apples continue good. Bananas may be a little higher than they have been and many of them are green in color.

KNIGHT IN WINTER WONDERLAND

"A Knight in Winter Wonderland" was the theme of a formal dinner of the Allouez General Assembly, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. George Schiedermayer and Mrs. Elmer Enz, Menasha, pause for a moment before dinner to talk. At right, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Winter select hors d'oeuvres during the cocktail hour which preceded the dinner at Ridgeway Country Club.

Knights and Their Ladies In Winter Wonderland

Helping His Wife with her chair at dinner is Arthur C. Freiburger, New London. The party which included a cocktail hour, dinner and dance was planned by Tony Winters, chairman, Joseph Suess, John Dietz, George Schiedermayer and Elmer Enz. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Here's Short Course On Warranty Fine Print

"Don't worry about a thing, ma'am. It's guaranteed!" Great, you think — no worries. I'll buy it. After all, if anything goes wrong, it's guaranteed.

But guaranteed for what? Parts and labor? What parts and for how long?

The warranty conditions should be one of the most important factors in your decision to buy a certain brand of appliance. Don't be misled by such claims as a "lifetime" guarantee. Talk over conditions with the salesman and read the fine print. Leslie Paige of the Whirlpool Corporation suggests you ask these questions:

1. What parts are covered and for how long?
2. Is labor covered? For how long?
3. Who stands behind the warranty — the manufacturer or the dealer? If a dealer goes out of business, be sure you aren't without a warranty.
4. Is the warranty in effect if you move?
5. Do you need to mail a registration card (some have a deadline for mailing) or save your sales receipt?
6. Must you mail a defective part somewhere to get warranty coverage? If yes, who pays for the charge of removing, replacing and mailing the defective part?
7. Must an authorized agent do the work? If yes, what is his address and phone number?

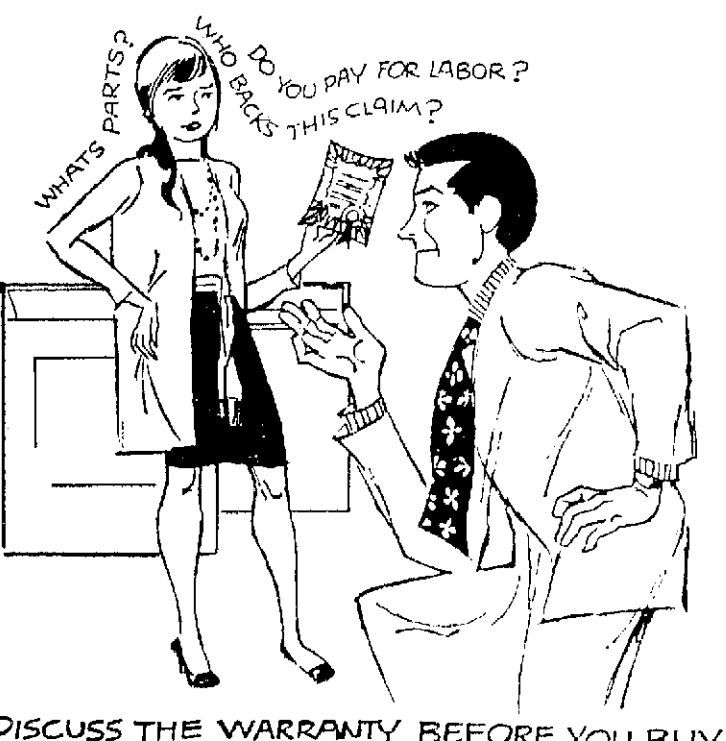

There are certain conditions under which the warranty does not apply. These, of course, differ from brand to brand, but some are standard. Warranties usually do not cover damage due to acts of abuse. If your three-year-old breaks the dryer door hinge by swinging on it, don't expect the warranty to pay for the damage.

The appliance must also be used according to direction in the owner's manual. If you turn a timer dial in the wrong direction and break a spring, the warranty probably won't cover it.

The warranty may not pay for malfunctioning due to inadequate house wiring or plumbing or failure to follow installation instructions.

Also, most warranties don't cover damage due to "acts of God," such as damage by floods. Your household insurance may cover that, though.

If the warranty doesn't seem worthwhile on a particular appliance, then shop around and compare. After all, good service and product reliability are critical to your satisfaction. And, if and when something goes wrong, you'll want coverage.

Young Hobby Club Identify Famous Man To Win Baseball Game

BY CAPPY DICK
What is the name of the famous American represented by the adjoining puzzle? You can learn his identity by completing seven words. Each word requires one letter. If the letter supplied is

For a contest entry to qualify for the national competition, it must first win a local prize which today will be a Cappy Dick pocket game called the Dipsy Ball Puzzle. Five of these will be awarded, one to each boy or girl who sends in one of the five neatest and most original correct solutions to the puzzle.

Entries winning the Dipsy Ball Puzzles will be advanced to the national level of competition where local winners from all Young Hobby Club cities will be considered again to find the five entries that are the neatest and most original correct ones. These will win the five national grand prizes.

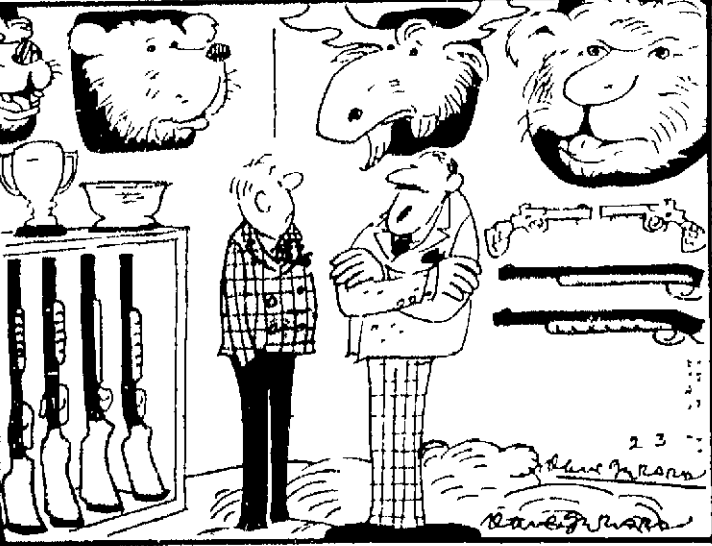

After figuring out the name of the famous American, print the letters in the blank spaces. Clip out the picture. Paste it on a sheet of paper. Print your name, age, address and Zip Code number beneath it. Decorate the entry in any neat, original way with paints, crayons or cutouts. Finally address it to Cappy Dick's Midweek All-Pro Baseball Contest at The Post-Crescent and mail it before midnight of day after tomorrow.

Names of the prize winners will be published here. The prizes will be sent to their homes by mail. Judges' decisions will be final. All entries become Cappy Dick's property; none can be returned.

Meat, Poultry Display Answers Many Questions That Plague Homemakers

Anyone who cooks (even the one who doesn't) has questions about the buying, storing, cooking and nutrition of meats and poultry.

Can you freeze a hot dog? Should you thaw frozen steaks before cooking? How do you know when a turkey is done?

Food for Life

Answers to these and other questions from consumers are featured in a new section of Swift & Company's exhibit at the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago. Colorful, appetizing photographs of meats and turkey add sparkle to the display and tempt the museum visitors as they read and learn.

The addition represents Swift's program for continuous updating of the "Food For Life" exhibit based on nutrition education.

The questions are some of those most frequently asked of Martha Logan, the name used by the firm's home economists. Here are some of the questions along with the answers.

Q. Can foods be stored in the cans after opening?

A Yes. The container the food was canned in was sterilized during the processing. It is a safe and clean container.

Q. How does the food value of canned meats compare with frozen cooked meats?

A Food nutrients such as protein, fat, and carbohydrates are almost identical for canned meats and frozen cooked meats.

Q. How long may canned foods be stored?

A Canned food, stored in a cool, dry place, will keep indefinitely as long as no damage occurs that would cause leaks.

Q. Can you freeze franks, bacon and ham?

A Yes, but use them within a month's time for best quality. The salt present in the meat favors the development of rancidity when the meat is frozen so the flavor will deteriorate when frozen for longer times.

Q. Are cold cuts nutritious?

A Yes. They have the same high nutritional value as all meats. Check the ingredients printed on the package. Ingredients are listed in the order of quantity used, the first being the largest amount.

Q. Should cured meats such as franks, bacon and cold cuts be rewrapped before storing them in the refrigerator?

A Cured meats such as franks, sliced luncheon meats, ham and bacon are best kept refrigerated in the package in which they were purchased, both before and after opening. Packages that do not have a reclosable feature should be over-wrapped before returning to the refrigerator.

Q. Can pork be included on weight reducing diets?

A By all means. Through teams of research workers, breeders, and farmers leaner pork was developed and is now available in the market. It is no higher in calories than other meats. Furthermore, pork is easily digested and is particularly rich in high quality protein and in thiamine.

Q. Why do you recommend using a low oven temperature for roasting beef?

A A slow oven temperature of 325 degrees Fahrenheit for roasting beef, and other meats, too, produces more even cooking, less shrinking, and less oven spattering than higher temperatures.

Q. Should you thaw frozen steaks before cooking?

A This is not necessary. Cook frozen beef steaks without prethawing. Just increase the cooking time to allow for thaw during cooking.

Q. How large a turkey should you buy?

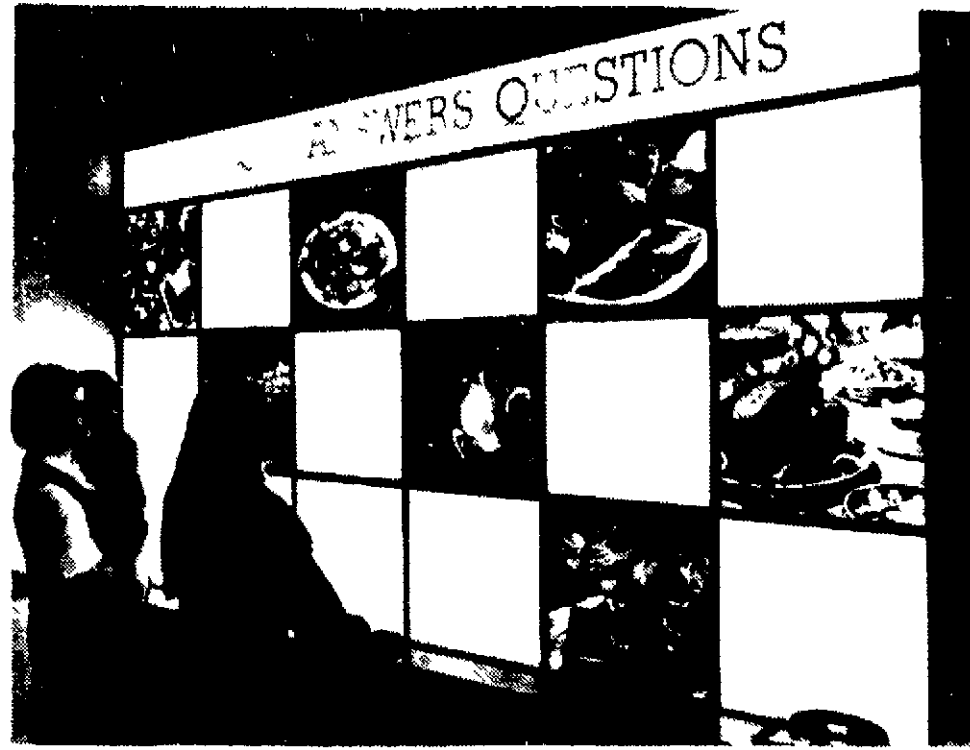

A Allow for each person 1½ pounds of the ready-to-stuff turkey and 1½ to 2 pounds of the pre-stuffed turkey. This gives generous servings with enough left for snacks and next day dishes.

Q. When roasting a turkey, how can you tell when it is done?

A A roast meat thermometer is used to determine the doneness. Insert the thermometer into the largest part of the thigh next to the body. The internal temperature of the thigh should be 180 degrees to 185 degrees Fahrenheit. Or, cover the thumb and forefinger with paper or cloth and pinch the thickest portion of the thigh. The turkey is done if the meat is soft.

Q. What is the advantage of having the turkey's major leg tendons removed?

A This makes carving the drumsticks much easier.

How do you explain a new package to a lady?

Ladies always balk at new packages. Well, you'll be happy to know this new hard box still has a soft package inside.

Hard cardboard box. This protects our fresh, creamy cream cheese in the grocery dairy case, the shopping cart, and the shopping bag.

However, once you get home, you can open the box and squeeze the new foil wrapper. It's sealed air-tight so you can't hurt the fresh cream cheese.

We've always said, Philadelphia Brand is guaranteed fresh when you buy it or your money back from Kraft. The new package enforces it.

Join the 'Big 10'

state high school ratings.

The Rockets increased their loss — at the hands of Green Bay East.

Nicolet Glendale and Racine

Dodgeville continues to lead the Little 10, but Kewaunee

Extend Win Streak to 29 Games Warriors Chill Badger '5'

By GENE LILLGE
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — Old man winter was on the side of the Marquette University basketball team Tuesday night, as the nation's top ranked college power put the freeze on intrastate foe Wisconsin, 89-75.

A sell-out crowd of 12,686 turned out to watch the rematch between the two state rivals. Marquette, rated No. 1 by the Associated Press, tripped the Badgers, 72-69, in the finals of the Milwaukee Classic early this season.

But this game, the 72nd meeting, was no contest.

Pressure Defense
Marquette's full court press defense frustrated the Badgers. Coach Al McGuire pulled the Warriors starters with six minutes left in the game and with the contest securely decided, 88-57.

The win was Marquette's 17th straight this season and 29th in a row. It is the longest winning streak of any major college in the country.

"I think the layoff hurt Wisconsin," McGuire said, alluding to the fact the Badgers have been idle since Jan. 19 because of final exams. "They were flatfooted," the colorful Warrior mentor added.

No Excuses
Wisconsin coach John Powless didn't see it quite the same however. "That would be easy to say," Powless said, after hearing McGuire's analysis. "But I prefer not to give excuses."

McGuire was "very pleased" with the victory and commented on where his team is at now. "We seem to be on the come now," he said.

Noting that the win was accomplished on the Badgers home court, and with six of their remaining nine games on the road, McGuire added, "You can never tell how good you are until you're on the road."

And how good are the Warriors?

Warriors No. 1
"They should be No. 1 in both polls," was Powless' answer. (Although ranked No. 1 in the AP, Marquette is No. 3 in the UPI poll.)

"I still go with UCLA, for the top spot," McGuire said.

The Warriors, with Dean (the Dream) Meminger taking advantage of two Badger miscues jumped off to an early 8-0 lead before Glen Richgels broke the Marquette press with an easy lay-in.

20 Point Spread

Wisconsin pulled within six, 16-10, five minutes into the game, but Marquette pulled away to a 28-10 advantage as Gary Brell and Jim Chones each tallied three baskets.

Jumpers by Chones and Allie McGuire gave the Warriors a 20-point edge midway through the period, 32-12.

With Meminger and Brell accounting for 14 points, Marquette moved to a 50-25 lead at the intermission. Brell netted 15 points in the first half as he connected on 7 of 11 shots from the floor and converted his only free throw try.

Chones, a 6-11 sophomore center, and All-American candidate Meminger each had 12.

Four Badgers, Richgels, Gary Watson, Leon Howard and Clarence Sherrod, each had six points at the half. Wisconsin hit on only 10 of 27 field goal attempts, while Marquette dropped 22 of 44. The Warriors, with Bob Lackey's 8, Brell's 7 and Chones' 6 rebounds, controlled the boards, 28-13.

"We proved the boards would be the difference," Powless explained after the game. "We didn't get the second shots, while they were getting multiple shots."

Brell, Chones and Meminger continued to plague the hosts on both offense and defense as the Warriors lead steadily increased in the second half. Meminger's short jumper a 12-43 gave Marquette its biggest lead of the night, 39 points, 74-35.

The Badgers were able to make the score look respectable as they outscored the Marquette reserves, 18-11, in the final six minutes of play.

Brell, whose previous single game high was 21 points, led all scorers with 30. The 6-6 senior forward finished with 14 baskets in 20 tries and two of four free throws. He also hauled down 13 rebounds.

Dream Hits 21
Meminger tallied 21 points, while Chones tallied 18 and collected 12 rebounds and Lackey contributed 12 markers and game high 14 rebounds.

Walton, sophomore forward from New York, paced Wisconsin with 19 points to tie his personal career high. Sherrod added 18 points, and along with Richgels, led the Badgers with 9 rebounds.

Wisconsin ended the game with a 40.5 per cent average from the floor, on 26 of 64, while Marquette connected on 38 of 81 for 46.9 per cent. The Warriors finished with a 58-41 rebound edge.

Sherrod now has a career total 1,159 points and is fourth on the Wisconsin all-time scoring list. Meminger also ranks fourth on the Marquette all-time list, 1,382 points.

The Foxes, Kanies believes, can beat Northwestern again if their pressing defense is effective. A lapse on defense could be costly though because the home forces will have a height advantage.

Twin Losses
Northwestern, like FVL, comes off a pair of weekend setbacks. Racine Lutheran beat the Watertown quint, 80-70, Friday night and then Martin Luther scored a 69-44 victory Saturday.

The Hornets' chief threat is Jim Metzger, who sports a 15.9 average in 10 games. Metzger was limited to nine points in the first meeting with FVL.

Adelman Stars Trail Blazers Hand Bucks 122-111 Loss

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers, after blowing a 19-point lead, rallied in the last four minutes here Tuesday night to upset the Milwaukee Bucks 122-111 in a National Basketball Association game.

Portland, which raced to a 65-48 halftime lead, showing a devastating fast break, fell behind the Milwaukee charge in the last quarter, but cashed in on three steals by guard Rick Adelman.

Adelman's first steal resulted in an 18-footer by Gary Gregor that put Portland ahead to stay at 108-106.

Jim Barnett with 27 points, and Gregor and Stan McKenzie, with 22 each, led the Blazers to the win.

It was the first time this season that Milwaukee, now 41-10, has lost to an expansion team.

Lew Alcindor, double-teamed most of the night by LeRoy Ellis and Dale Schlueter, finished with 38 points, but only nine rebounds.

He took only 19 shots at the basket.

Both teams shot 51 per cent. A crowd of 9,040 gave Portland a standing ovation at the end of the game.

Give Up Burda, Taylor Brewers Trade for Rodriguez and Reahm

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Outfielder Carl Taylor was traded by the Milwaukee Brewers to Kansas City in exchange for catcher Ellie Rodriguez.

The American League club said Taylor, acquired only recently from the St. Louis Cardinals, was a good hitter. But the Brewers said they needed Rodriguez, 24, as a backup catcher for Phil Roof.

The Brewers also traded outfielder Bob Burda to St. Louis for Fred Reahm, 23, a southpaw pitcher who has yet to play major league ball and who had a 4-3 record in the minors.

Reahm was obtained by the Cards last September on waivers from the New York Mets organization. In the last two seasons he had a 1-3 record with Tidewater in the Interna-

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — Officially the score read: Montreal 5, Vancouver 2, but stragglers among the 15,569 fans at Tuesday night's only National Hockey League game could well have thought it was a 3-2 victory for the visitors.

With the game only 36 seconds old, Jean Beliveau hit the corner of the Vancouver net with a 10-footer for his first goal of the game. Then, with the second period only 31 seconds along he got the puck to Marc Tardif who scored to give the Canadiens a 3-0 lead.

It took a little longer in the third period when 7 1/2 minutes had ticked off before Beliveau slammed home his 15th goal of the season.

John Ferguson, coming around slowly after a brief retirement, also scored a pair of goals for the Canadiens.

After Tardif's quickie in the second period, the Canucks pulled themselves together to score (twice and cut the Montreal lead to 3-2.

Ligaments Loosening

Sayers Scheduled for More Knee Surgery

CHICAGO (AP) — Halfback Gale Sayers of the Chicago Bears must undergo additional surgery on his left knee later this month.

Sayers had an operation on the left knee last October but Dr. Theodore Fox said Tuesday the new surgery would be in a different area.

Two years ago Sayers had surgery performed on his right knee and the brilliant former Kansas star came back to lead the National Football League in rushing in 1969.

Sayers was bothered by his left knee early last season and Dr. Fox operated in October to correct "stretching of the posterior cruciate ligament."

Recent Workouts Dr. Fox said surgery was completely successful but in recent workouts Sayers suffered loosening of ligaments on the inner side of the left knee. The new operation will be performed Feb. 16.

"Gale became aware of his weakness and agreed to my decision that surgery would be needed to make his knee stronger and more secure by tightening the inner side," said Dr. Fox.

Because of the type of runner he is, it's better to do the work now than to wait until later. In this way, he will have better stability well in advance of next season."

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Patriots have a new offensive coordinator and are looking for two new defensive coaches in the wake of changes announced by the National Football League team Tuesday.

Sam Rutigliano, an assistant with the Denver Broncos for the past three seasons, was named to the offensive coordinator post with the Patriots. He'll fill the spot vacated by John Mazur, who was elevated to the head coaching post in mid-season last fall and later reappointed for the 1971 campaign.

The job of defensive coordinator was opened up Tuesday when it was announced that Bill Elias was resigning from that post to accept the newly created position of director of community relations for the team.

The third change announced Tuesday was the resignation of defensive line coach Jesse Richardson, who had held that position since 1965.

Grassl finished with a 542 series and Fietzer had games of 220 and 183.

For the girls, Pat Miller had a 225 game and a 515 series.

Other high scores for the boys included Ron Lenz 197-190-531, Dale Reh 202-518, Colin Dowling 506, Bruce Jansen 190-192-536 and Tom Van Ryzin 207-189-574.

Friday's Schedule:
Winnecoon at Ripon
Omro at Hortonville
New London at Berlin
Weyauwega at Wausau

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Can Berlin be the "giant killer" two weeks in succession? This is the question plaguing New London Coach Dick Bennett, as his team heads into the final three weekends of basketball in the East Central Conference.

New London, with a 5-game winning streak, its own initiative and a helping hand here and there has moved into a tie for first in the ECC. Ripon is the co-leader, with a 9-2 record.

Friday's slate has New London at Berlin (7-4), Winnecoon (3-8) at Ripon, Omro (1-10) at Hortonville (8-3), and Weyauwega (3-8) at Wausau (4-7).

Helping Hand
Berlin extended the Bulldogs' a helping hand by upsetting Ripon, 63-55, Saturday, while Wausau also helped by dropping Hortonville, 68-59.

Berlin-New London shapes up as the key contest. While the Wausau-Weyauwega fracas didn't only have meaning in the standings, but has been a traditional game for years.

New London eked out a 55-49 win in the first meeting, but that took place in the friendly home confines. Bennett's Bulldogs not only have gained momentum, but seem to look better each time out — particularly defensively.

Tough Defense
During the past week the Bulldogs limited Hortonville to 45 points and Winnecoon to 36. They lead the loop easily, with a 53.1 defensive average.

The Bulldogs have attained their lofty position without a "big scorer." Each of the five starters has had big nights, but balance and depth have been more important as the current "not hand" gets the ball.

Cal Handschke, 6-3 pivot, is the leader with 13.4. Gary Wendt, also 6-3, is next with 12.1. The other corner, Dave Teschke, at 6-2, is netting 11.9. The backcourt starters, Roger Steingraber and Bill Stern, are averaging 10.7 and 10.4, respectively.

Berlin also is diversified, averaging 65.8 to New London's 66.2 offensively. The Indians' defense is allowing 62.2, however.

Doug Parsons, 16-1, and Bruce Ursin, 12-8, play the corners, and don't only match the Bull-

Redleg Officials Irked Over Team Members, Basketball

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — "That's one of Marvin Miller's organized, competitive basketball brains. I'm sure he won't re-bell should be a no for major league basketball players," says Bob Howsam and Sparky Anderson, who engineered the move that basketball was permitted in current contracts.

The general manager and manager of the National League pennant-winning Cincinnati Reds have the scar — a serious injury to star center fielder Bob Tolan — to prove it.

Against the club's wishes, Tolan, Johnny Bench, Pete Rose, Jimmy Stewart, Lee Maye and Jim Maloney agreed to play a 19-game basketball barnstorming tour this winter.

Tolan tore an Achilles tendon during a basketball game and will be sidelined until June, forcing Howsam to think of contract rule amendments and Anderson to shuffle his outfield talent.

"I think clubs should have the say if players are to play basketball in their contracts. We cannot do that now because of the last negotiations with the players," Howsam said.

dog's height, but are more rugged. Larry Bahr, the 6-5 pivot, is netting 13.7, while Larry Hollmaier, in the backcourt, is averaging 11.2. Larry Bahr (6-1) hit eight points against Ripon and hauled in 17 rebounds.

Wausau has shown signs previously of putting its game together, but the big victory last week may be the ingredient to give the Comets the needed surge.

Lewis Comet Key
Tim Lewis, a dandy junior forward, is the scoring leader with 14.9. Lee Solberg, another junior, has 10.6, while Jim Jensen, a senior, is averaging 10.8.

Weyauwega counters with the league's top scorer in Randy Faulks, a 6-3 junior, averaging 17.9, and Jeff Gast, another junior, tallying 14.3. The Indians' Ron Kriese is adding 11.6.

Disastrous Weekend
Hortonville, which had won 10 of 11 games, has made a turnaround and lost 3 of 4. The last weekend was particularly disastrous as a split would have given the Polar Bears a share of the lead.

In both losses the Polar Bears' balance failed and no individual took charge to make up the difference. Only Roger Warming's average raised during the week — indicating the cold times which befell the Polar Bears.

Bipartisan Deficit Problems

When Gov. Lucey hurried to Washington to plead for federal revenue sharing, he made a good argument and demonstrated a truth that is not always remembered: the problem of financing the fierce hunger for public service spending is a truly bipartisan one. A Democrat finds it no easier to accommodate than a Republican, whatever impressions may be created during the heat of the election campaign struggles.

Much of what Gov. Lucey said before the Joint Economic Committee of the Congress would have been said had he lost the election last November, and had Jack Olson confronted the sobering brutality of the state's fiscal dilemma in the state executive office. Parenthetically, Mr. Olson's campaign theme then and now appeared almost as unrealistic, to the extent that he intended to promise a no tax increase policy, as does Mr. Lucey's with the recollection of his implied positions for more spending and notably, for allocations of state funds for the lowering of the crushing load of property levies in many localities.

Nevertheless, the new governor's position as he recorded it before the Congress is the only one a reasonable man in his office could assume and he should have the full backing of his constituents without regard to their normal voting behavior or partisan preference.

The Wisconsin tax load is truly onerous. It reflects a high standard of public service expectation and to that extent represents the wishes of a majority of Wisconsin residents, however much they may grumble about the consequences. Yet we are approaching the practical limits of state and local taxing capacity, which is what

Mr. Lucey's publicly displayed travail means.

The national government is in fact the major antagonist in the struggle for the preservation of local and state autonomy and the health and vigor of their public services, ranging from desirable, to useful, to essential.

The federal government now claims two out of three of the tax dollars yielded up by individuals and corporate enterprise of this state. The aggregate is among the highest per capita in the country, and is in fact the highest in some categories such as the taxation of incomes. There is no longer sufficient stretch in the Wisconsin tax base to assure the continued survival of local and state government in a healthy condition. The mammoth harvest of Washington must be shared.

Mr. Mills, and to some degree Rep. Byrnes of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, protest that they are opposed in principle to the idea that one level of government should have the "onus" of levying a tax, and that others should have the pleasure and the political value of disbursing it. In another era, that might have been persuasive. But as Grover Cleveland, that pragmatist of another era, put it so nicely, it is a condition and not a theory that confronts us.

Mr. Mills somewhat egregiously complains also that the Nixon formula would unfairly benefit Wisconsin. If it promises to do so, the reason is that Wisconsin has exerted itself far beyond the rest of the country in state and local tax effort. If this state is eligible for a bonus return, therefore, it is because its record of high taxation at its own initiative makes it worthy and, more important, shows that it is more closely approaching the collapse point.

VISTA's in Town—Looking for Volunteers

There's a great deal of talk today throughout the United States about poverty and injustice and hate and prejudice.

In most cases, it's only that — talk. But it need not be. Something constructive can be done about those problems. Some people are certainly trying.

VISTA is trying. But VISTA isn't just a name of some group "out there." It's a group of volunteers who are putting their time and effort where their mouth is.

It's a group of people trying to act as catalysts in helping the poor to identify the elements of a problem, determine a course of action and initiate it.

They serve in every type of environment — rural and urban, work with blacks in the ghetto and whites in a multitude of depressed areas.

It's not another give-away program or another handout. The only handout is the hand extended from one human being to another.

Those who've served for that one year claim it's a tough job. Full of confusion, conflicts, changes and disappointments. And they claim they'd do it again.

They claim it's difficult and frustrating — because poverty is difficult and frustrating.

Everyone knows you can't solve the major problems in one short year, but perhaps you can start. At least, one can try.

This week, VISTA representatives will be at Lawrence University interviewing people who are interested in helping the disadvantaged help themselves.

Needless to say, not everyone is suited. It's a job for people with a certain type of guts.

But it's a job which has to be done.

And it isn't going to be done by "someone out there" who works with VISTA. It has to be done by volunteers — people who up to now only talked about it. This week there's an opportunity locally to do something about it.

Heart Disease and Churchgoing

It was only a short article, hardly five column inches, pretty well buried on an inside page, near the bottom, but the information it conveyed must have cheered the life of many a minister of the Gospel.

Together with the rest of the "Establishment," the organized church and its leaders have taken their share of criticism, denunciations and prophecies of doom. Comes now this Johns Hopkins University medical researcher who says that churchgoing is good therapy for the heart. "Heart Disease Incidence Less For Churchgoers" is the way the article was identified in the one column headline.

Dr. George W. Comstock, who is professor of epidemiology at the school of hygiene and public health, has submitted his findings in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. The doctor did a study of more than 500 men between the ages of 45 and 64 in the years of 1963 to 1966. His conclusion is that the incidence of fatal heart disease among infrequent churchgoers is twice as high as for men who attend church at least once a week.

We doubt whether many clergymen will try to use the good doctor's findings in attempts to boost church attendance. Sleep, after all, is good for the heart, too, and some enterprising church neglecter might put two and two together and come up with a not so complimentary answer.

We're sure, though, that our good clergymen are very much interested in the presence of the heart at public worship, and by that they would mean, not just the physical heart in a man's body, but the spiritual "heart" of man's attention, loyalty and belief. Almost 2000 years ago the greatest of all preachers said it very simply and bluntly when He declared that, to "draw nigh to" Him with mouth, and to "honor" Him with lipservice meant nothing if "the heart is far from Me."

Recipe for Homemade Paste

100 YEARS AGO

Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for Feb. 4, 1871.

(The following recipe appeared on the front page of the newspaper, telling how to make homemade paste.)

A perpetual paste may be made by dissolving an ounce of alum in a quart of warm water.

When cold, add as much kitchen flour as will make the consistency of cream; then stir into the mixture a half a teaspoonful of powdered rosin and two or three cloves. Boil this mixture down, stirring all the time.

It will keep for 12 months and, when dry, the paste may be softened with water.

Will Wallace Run?

Guessing Now Is He Won't; Recent Marriage Is Clue

BY KEVIN P. PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON — Although the bra-less wonders of the Women's Liberation Movement will never admit it, the fairer sex still exerts its greatest political influence in pursuit of domesticity.

English Protestantism, one remembers, got a vital boost in the marital bed of King Henry VIII, and many a politician's ambition has been spurred or curbed by wifely circumstances.

One of America's most recently wed politicians, Alabama's Governor George C. Wallace, may be an example. A widower since his first wife, Lurleen, died of cancer in 1968, the Governor has just remarried — to a woman who should work a considerable change in his lifestyle.

The late Lurleen Wallace, elected Governor of Alabama in 1966 as a stand-in for George (ineligible to succeed himself in office), was a reticent, small-town housewife. She was a 16-year-old Tuscaloosa dime store clerk when she married the future Presidential candidate. They had courted when Wallace, although a college graduate, was driving an Alabama highway dump truck for thirty cents an hour waiting for his World War Two call-up.

He is One of Them

This is not said in derogation. On the contrary, Wallace's great appeal to the ordinary citizens of the Deep South has been rooted in the fact that he is so demonstrably one of them.

But the new Mrs. Cornelia Wallace, an attractive 31-year-old divorcee, is the niece of a former Alabama governor, an ex-professional water-skier and the former wife of a wealthy Florida businessman. With no deprecation intended, she is the sort of "country-clubber" that it has been Wallace's style to mock up and down

Mrs. Club of First Congregational Church.

Tom Lembcke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lembcke, Appleton, received the Webelos Award, highest honor in Cub Scouting. He also became a member of Boy Scout Troop 2 at the Pack meeting at Roosevelt Junior High School.

10 YEARS AGO

Wednesday, Feb. 1, 1961.

Mrs. John Brock was elected president of the Appleton Apostolate Guild. Other new officers were Mrs. Robert Breechin, vice president; Mrs. James Piette, secretary.

Miss Karen Wendt, valedictorian of the 1959 class at Fox Valley Lutheran High School, was awarded a Delta Kappa Gamma scholarship at Wisconsin State College-Oshkosh. Miss Wendt, from West Bloomfield, was a sophomore student in elementary education.

Officers newly elected by the United Church Women of Neenah-Menasha were Mrs. Joseph Kubicka, president; Mrs. Robert Dannenbrink and Mrs. Donald Blank, vice presidents; Mrs. John Helms, secretary, and Mrs. E. J. Christoph, treasurer.

Dixie's small-town American Legion Hall circuit.

Because of this and other changing circumstances, Governor Wallace might find it hard to resume his old technique of campaigning against "niggers" and "country-clubbers." However, he reportedly doesn't plan to. The well-tailored Mrs. Wallace will not have to accompany her husband to speak in Confederate-flag-bedecked high school gymnasiums across the Bar-B-Que Belt simply because he does not plan to run for President in 1972.

Of course, the Alabama Governor does not say this publicly. But White House political strategists, piecing together intelligence on Wallace's conversations with confidants, come to this conclusion.

The race issue, Wallace reportedly said, is just about dead unless new integration schemes revive it. Most Dixie politicians concur, and so do White House polls. As the Alabama Governor sees things, the economy is the issue he would have to use in 1972. Populist economics have always been the flip side of his appeal to the "little man."

"If the economy snaps back, I lose my issue," Wallace says. "If the economy gets worse, then the Democrats would win and there would be no point in my running." The Governor concludes: "But if things stay the way they are now, I'd run because I might hold the balance of power."

Those are not George Wallace's words, of course. Yet they convey the gist of what he is telling sympathizers. And Wallace is too canny a politician not to know the real scenario he is scripting. Things just don't stand still: the race issue hasn't and the economy won't. President Nixon, as Wallace understands full well, will take any far-reaching measures necessary to boost the economy and reduce unemployment by 1972.

It is also easy to see a human factor in Wallace's calculations. For him, the Nineteen-Sixties were a zenith of turmoil, frustration and combat; of seething ambition and a wife, pushed into Alabama's governorship, dying as her husband's Presidential campaign got underway. If one assesses Wallace's words and actions, including his marriage, perhaps even as he sees America's malaise receding, he is banking his own fires of the Sixties.

Wallace recently let it be known that, had it been necessary, he would have thrown the 1968 election to Richard Nixon in the Electoral College. When you first say something like this two years later, it has important historical implications.

If George Wallace doesn't run for President in 1972, what will he do? Would either candidate want his endorsement? Would either candidate want to turn it down bluntly? The fighting Alabama rooster may not run for President in 1972, but regardless, he will be concerned about his place in the sun.

Republicans Playing It Cool in Madison; Await Lucey's Plans

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — In the vocabulary of the young, the Republicans are playing it "cool" as they become accustomed to their diminished role in the state government and watchfully await the unfolding of the plans and strategies of the Democratic administration.

Assembly Minority Leader Harold Froehlich, who was captain of the Republican ruling bloc in the Assembly in several preceding terms, has been elaborately courteous and has nodded approvingly and with benefit of press releases about "austerity" themes of the Democratic executive office.

Some Democrats may regard such words from such a source as faint praise, indeed, but if the Froehlich pronouncements are intended to convey a note of sarcasm they cannot afford to acknowledge it.

What Froehlich is saying is that his group's record in earlier times, and notably in the 1969 legislature when he was so often called "ultraconservative" could not have been far off the mark when the Democrats now attempt a similar posture on the pervading issue of money and taxes.

Kepler Is Cordial

In the Senate where the Republicans retain a powerhouse majority, GOP Leader Ernest Kepler has shown a cordiality and a will to cooperate that is well beyond the normal definitions of duty in such circumstances. The Senate, it is useful to remember, will have an earlier opportunity to demonstrate its good will — as in voting on principal Democratic administrative appointments.

It is already apparent that Gov. Lucey won't be troubled by the kind of deliberate, partisan motivation that afflicted his friend, former Gov. John Reynolds, when he submitted nominations to another Republican Senate in 1965. Many of the survivors of the Senate of that time evidently now feel that they erred in their relations with Reynolds.

Their excuse at the time, such as it was, related to the narrowness of Reynolds' 1964 victory and the conviction that he would have only a single two-year term. The calculation turned out to be correct. The unconfirmed Reynolds men left opportunities for Republicans to return to those places after the elections of 1966.

Situation Is Different

Today the situation is quite different. The new governor will have four years. Even if the Senate is reluctant to approve his nominations, it cannot hold out with any justification for the longer period. Republicans like Democrats have a keen sense of the realities. Much as they would like to do so, they cannot close their eyes to the fact that the new regime won a smashing electoral vote, a mandate in Wisconsin terms as convincing as any in two decades.

The spirit of the constitutional-parliamentary system intends that gubernatorial nominations be confirmed in the absence of compelling reasons to reject them. Thus far the new governor has given no such provocation.

All this is not to say that the Republicans intend to roll over and play dead for the duration. They have arrows for the bow, as one of the State Supreme Court justices likes to remark in his opinions.

Conflict on Finances

The conflict will come on fiscal matters, not only on the size and purposes of the Democratic budget, but on the tax measures that will accompany it. When the Republicans take a critical posture on those issues they will have an attentive audience as well as a useful precedent.

It was only two years ago, as some of them remember with audible sighs, that the Democrats as a minority voted against the Republican budget-revenue bill en masse. They conveyed resistance to new taxes, or a desire for more appropriations, according to the predilections of observant constituents. Democrats provided useful leads to the new Republican minority in other ways — as in offering bundles of succulent goodies they knew could not pass, but forced the Republicans to roll call records in opposition.

But Republicans know how to play that game, as shown for example, in the GOP-signed bills now emerging that propose generous measures of property tax relief. Democrats will be obliged to kill them in defiance of the theme that keynoted their successful election drives.

Original Sin Like Stone in One's Shoe

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

There was a drama assignment I didn't want to cover, because it fell on a Friday evening, which conflicted with a social engagement I had been eagerly looking forward to that night.

The morning before, I telephoned my wife from the office and told her we could accept the social engagement. "Good news," I said, "the performance has been cancelled for Friday night."

What was the "good news"? Emyln Williams' wife had died suddenly in London, and he flew back to arrange the funeral, scratching all his performances of "An Evening with Charles Dickens."

As I hung up, it occurred to me what I had said. This was sad news, really, for a man on a successful tour of the country. But at the moment, my silly engagement on Friday night loomed larger to me than his permanent personal loss.

And this, basically, is what the theologians mean by "original sin." Not something profound and dreadful and mysterious and shockingly wicked; nothing as dramatic as all that. Simply that a pebble in our own shoe is more important, and more aggravating, than a man or a million men) perishing in Pakistan at that very instant.

And not until this balance is redressed — not until the world is no longer seen as revolving around each individual ego, which is the Sun, and everybody else just satellites — will any political or social or economic system work for the full benefit of mankind, instead of for a powerful few.

This is the whole reason for what we call "religion," and the rest is mostly nonsense: to help us become God-centered rather than man-centered, to make us realize that what happens to anyone else is as significant in the scheme of things as what happens to each of us.

Nothing less than this is large enough to shake us out of our aboriginal selfishness. For if we do not worship this true god, we begin to worship false ones — the state, the race, the church itself — and compound the sin of selfishness by committing collective injustices upon those who give allegiance to a different state, race, or church.

"Whatever you do to the lowliest of men you are doing unto Me," Jesus warned, in the most direct expression of this creed. To cheat, to hate, to kill — even to "not care" — is to wound the Maker of the universe. As long as the pebble in the shoe takes precedence over the pestilence in Pakistan, we remain enslaved by the illusion of our individuality; and though we cry "Master, Master," we cannot distinguish the good news from the bad.

Leave winter behind with CHEVY'S 4-WHEEL-DRIVE PICKUP

Get a tough truck for a hard winter. Get a Chevy Pickup with 4-wheel drive that makes "m" the best on the road, off the road; in snow, mud, you name it. The silhouette is quite low, but ground clearance for deep snow and off-road driving is exceptional. Not only that, but Chevy's front axle turn angle is forty degrees. So you can run around in nice tidy little circles if you like. Besides, you get radio, power steering, Turbo Hydramatic transmission, and lots more driving conveniences. See us soon and make a long winter short.

McKINLEY SALES . . . AS ALWAYS!

For twenty four years, McKinley Sales has been striving hard to capably serve the Fox Cities area. We have always tried to maintain quality throughout our operation . . . in product — with the best in appliances, television and electronics — and in service.

A year ago, McKinley Sales came into new ownership. But with that development we gained strength . . . not change. It has given us a new outlook — and the future looks bright for us and our customers.

Pictured here are familiar faces to you all . . . they stand ready to serve you in the future as they have so capably in the past.

Thant Reports Progress in Mideast Talks

Egypt Withholds Opinion; Truce Expires Friday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Secretary-General U Thant says the Middle East peace talks at the United Nations are showing some signs of progress and the cease-fire should be extended, but Egyptian government officials appeared cool to the suggestion today.

The Cairo government withheld its official reaction, presumably waiting for President Anwar Sadat's speech to the National Assembly Thursday, the day before the six-month-old truce is to expire.

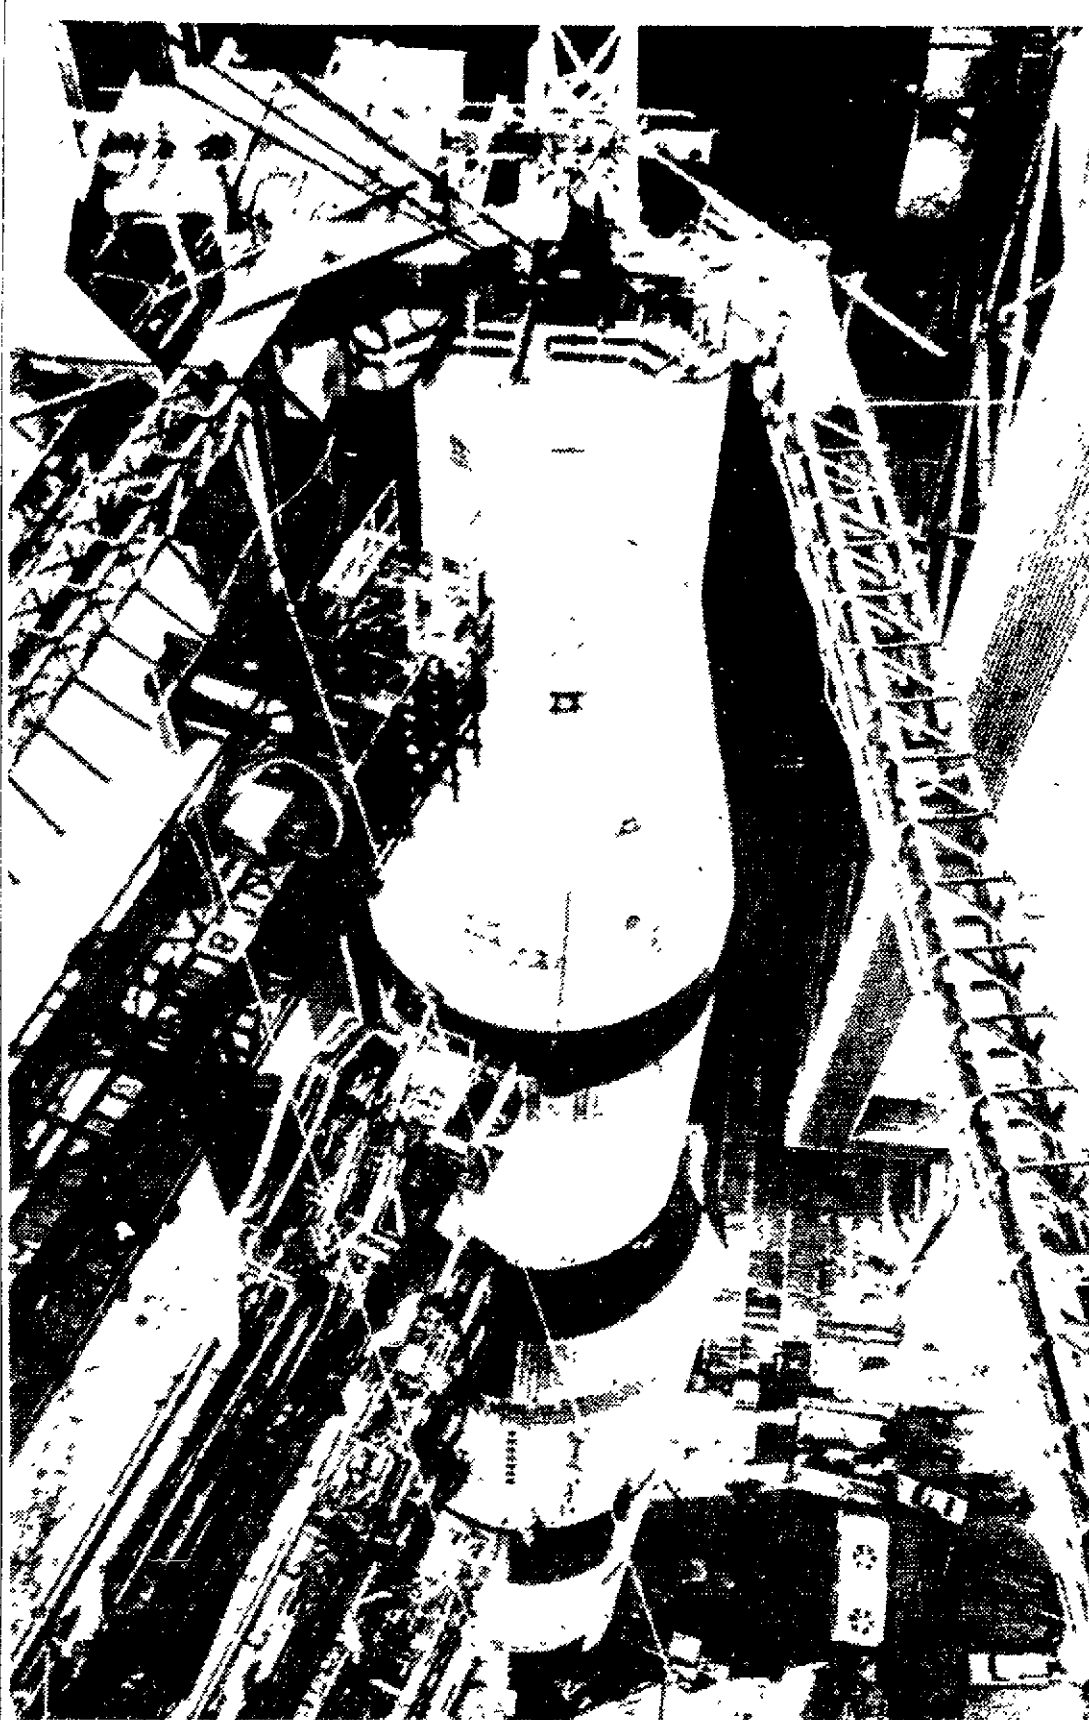

But a government spokesman, Munir Hafez, said: "It is clear from U Thant's statement that he had nothing new on the progress of the talks." Egypt repeatedly has said it will accept no extension unless there is significant headway in discussions.

mediator Gunnar V. Jarring is holding with representatives of Israel, Jordan and Egypt. Security Council
Thant reported to the Security Council Tuesday that the talks are young, and issues still must be clarified. But he said he found "grounds for cautious optimism" because serious discussions were under way and "there has been some progress in the definition of their positions."

He appealed "in this very difficult and crucial stage of the discussions, to withhold fire, to exercise military restraint and to maintain the quiet which has prevailed in the area since August 1970."

Mohammed H. el-Zayyat, Egypt's chief U.N. delegate, said he would forward the appeal to Cairo. He said, however, "It is hard to see, as of now, any reasons for optimism."

Nixon, Advisers Silent on Laos

WASHINGTON (AP) — With President Nixon consulting key national-security advisers, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has asked for information about a rumored U.S.-South Vietnamese operation near the Laotian border.

Nixon held an unannounced meeting with some of his high-level advisers late Tuesday, and administration spokesmen refused to discuss military plans—except to repeat assurances no U.S. troops have crossed into Laos and none will.

There was no indication any decision was reached in Nixon's meeting with Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, Adm. Thomas Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, foreign-policy adviser Henry Kissinger, and Richard Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Troops Massed
The Washington Post reported today 25,000 South Vietnamese ground troops were massed near the Laotian border Tuesday, "preparing to raid Vietnamese Communist bases and supply lines in Laos with U.S. air support."

Operating with them, U.S. sources unofficially acknowledged, is a screening force of about 9,000 American troops, who are under instructions to halt at the Laotian border when "cross-border operations begin," the newspaper reported.

Rogers insisted last Friday that unlimited U.S. airpower will be available anywhere in Indochina to protect GIs withdrawing from South Vietnam. He refused at that time to discuss whether the assurance was related to any planned offensive.

Foreign Reports
Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he can't understand why Rogers failed to tell the panel last week about plans for the operation which some foreign newsmen say already is under way.

Fulbright said the secrecy covered operation reminds him of last April when Rogers testified before the committee two days before the start of the U.S. incursion into Cambodia.

"He didn't mention that either," Fulbright said after the committee voted to summon Rogers and Laird as soon as possible for testimony about the operation—in open session if possible.

Rumors of some massive allied assault into the Laotian panhandle, designed to destroy Communist supply lines leading into South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia from the north, have been building since last Friday.

U.S. officials, here and in Saigon, have refused to discuss the rumors. However, Laird conceded publicly Tuesday that an embargo has been imposed on news stories relating to such an offensive.

Laird Reply
Asked on Capitol Hill about the rumored operation, Laird replied: "I have absolute confidence in the news media and the embargo which you are aware of I have no further comment at this time in response to your question."

Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, senior Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, said the State Department told him last Friday U.S. and South Vietnamese troops are massed near the Laotian border "for a large operation we might be undertaking."

The administration has given us to understand they're preparing for a massive attack from the north."

Meanwhile, a Hanoi broadcast said the pro-Communist Pathet Lao sent an urgent message to Great Britain and the Soviet Union, cochairmen of the 1962 Geneva Convention on Laos, denouncing "new U.S. adventures" in Laos.

The message referred to an intrusion into Laos of Thai troops and of a U.S.-South Vietnamese buildup poised "to enter and attack Laos."

"Intrusion" Reported
In Saigon a South Vietnamese spokesman said he could neither confirm nor deny reports that Saigon forces had entered Laos.

The Foreign Relations Committee voted to hold new public hearings on U.S. involvement in Indochina, including Nixon administration plans for ending the war.

The hearings would cover such alternative proposals as the Hatfield-McGovern amendment to cut off funds for U.S. forces in Southeast Asia at the end of the year.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott, meanwhile, defended the administration against grumbling about secrecy surrounding the rumored operation.

Reasonable Disclosures
Congress is entitled to reasonable and proper disclosure about such operations, he said, but "it isn't entitled to have it the moment it happens."

"I don't know why the getting of a piece of news is more important than the saving of a life," Scott said.

"I can't see what has been Turn to Page 2, Col. 3

Embargo on War News Is Admitted

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.S. Command in South Vietnam, as it has from time to time, has placed an embargo on certain news from the northern part of the country.

Furthermore, it has taken the rather unusual step of prohibiting correspondents from mentioning the embargo. The news of the embargos have come from Washington, not Saigon.

Thus it is that while Saigon is silent, stories come out of Washington and other capitals that certain operations have begun or are in preparation.

Embargos are nothing new to the fighting in South Vietnam. For example, the U.S. Command placed a news blackout for 18 days on an American campaign into the A Shau Valley of northern South Vietnam in 1968.

The reason for these embargos is security. Publicity given to an operation conceivable could tell the enemy more than he would know under a news blackout.

The enemy, however, may be aware of the full extent of the operations, and thus it is that the news leaks out of foreign capitals before any stories are filed from Saigon.

During embargos, correspondents are kept informed of what is happening through briefing, even though they can send nothing until the blackout is lifted.

Antares Ready for Landing

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo 14 swept into the grasp of lunar gravity today and sped on toward a Thursday morning orbit of the moon.

Earlier, astronauts Alan B. Shepard Jr. and Edgar D. Mitchell inspected their landing craft Antares and declared it ready to transport them to a precision landing in ancient lunar highlands Friday.

"Immaculate," said Cmdr Shepard of the moon lander.

To Mission Control Center they televised a picture of their target, a shimmering half crescent that loomed larger and larger as their home planet shrank in the distance.

At 9:12 a.m. CST, Shepard, Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa zipped through a so-called "twilight zone" in which the gravitational influence of the earth and moon is equal. They were 212,774 miles from earth and 38,894 miles from the moon.

When Apollo 14 passed this invisible line, the moon won the gravitational tug of war and the spaceship's speed accelerated after slowing to about 1,600 miles per hour on the long outward coast.

The speed will increase to about 5,700 miles per hour as the astronauts loop behind the moon's backside early Thursday. At 1:01 a.m. they are to fire the engine of the command ship Kitty Hawk to whip into lunar orbit.

The spacemen were in a sleep period as they entered the lunar sphere of influence, resting for the grueling days ahead in the vicinity of the moon.

About 3:20 a.m. today Shepard and Mitchell floated through a connecting tunnel into the lunar module while Roosa remained in the command ship. The two craft are linked nose to nose.

Following the extensive two and one-half hour examination, the two astronauts returned to the Kitty Hawk and reported Antares in good condition for the daring descent to the highlands of Fra Mauro.

Before opening the tunnel hatches, Mitchell manned the television camera, panning it around the command cabin to show switches and dials. He pointed it out a window and zoomed in on the moon.

"From our point of view the moon appears about the size of a grapefruit held at arm's length," he said. "It's starting to get considerably bigger. I don't have the earth to compare it with at the moment, but I suspect maybe the moon is starting to exceed the earth in apparent size."

205,000 Miles Away
They were about 205,000 miles from home and 41,000 miles from the moon.

Mission Control informed the astronauts their families were in the center watching the telecast.

"Yeah, 3:15 a.m. (CST) is a good time of night to have a TV show," Roosa remarked.

Shepard and Mitchell also showed TV pictures inside the lunar module as they checked out switches, the communications and other systems.

"The whole LM (lunar module) is immaculate, extremely clean," Shepard reported.

Mitchell said they found only one washer floating about in the weightless cabin.

"A lot of credit goes to the ground checkout crew, because the spacecraft is really clean," Mitchell said.

Before Camera
For TV Roosa held up a patch which had been smuggled into the spaceship before launch by the backup crew. It was a take-off on the Apollo 14 emblem, which shows an astronaut pin heading for the moon on a comet tail. The backup crew's patch has two comic characters, a roadrunner and a coyote, in chase scene between earth and moon, topped by the words "Beep. Beep."

"These unauthorized patches keep popping up here every time we open a compartment," Roosa chuckled.

Effective About May 15 Postal Rates Increased

WASHINGTON — In an effort to reduce the chronic deficit costs of the U.S. Postal Service, higher rates will be put into effect about May 15.

Changes include a rise from 6 to 8 cents for letters, an increase from 10 to 11 cents for air mail, and a hike from 5 to 6 cents for post cards.

Third class bulk, commonly known as "junk mail" will go from a minimum of 3.8 to 5 cents per piece. Special delivery will rise from 45 to 60 cents and registered mail valued up to $100, from 80 to 95 cents.

Parcel post was not affected. But also announced was a 10 cent boost in the first pound special cost of mailing fourth class books, records and films.

Newspaper Rates
Second class rates for newspapers and magazines will rise by 142 per cent spread over five years. This would add 3 to 4 cents a copy to the cost of mailing most of these items.

The increases, which are expected to arouse protests from the publishing industry, were announced by Asst. Postmaster General James W. Hargrove. The officials feel, he said, that this "will put the postal system on a sound financial basis for the first time in many years."

Hargrove also served notice that further increases might be necessary to finance pay increases now under negotiation between the new postal service and employee unions.

The price of a first class 6 cent postage stamp has been raised three times since 1959, when it was 3 cents.

The rates, approved by Postmaster General Winton M. Blount and the Board of Governors of the government-owned Postal Corporation, are subject to change by an independent five-member Postal Rate Commission, which took over Congress' ratemaking powers under the 1970 Postal Reorganization Act.

The rates were submitted Monday to the commission, which has 90 days to issue final rate changes.

Because the commission was not expected to complete its work within that time, the service's new rates will go into effect about mid-May on a temporary basis until the final decision.

The higher rates (the maximum one-third increase permitted pending a final decision by the commission) were intended to raise more than $14 million in additional revenues in the 1971-72 fiscal year and to "shift more of the costs from the taxpayer generally to those who use the mails the most."

The Postal Service is counting on Congress to subsidize operating costs by another $16 million.

Few Volunteers Want to Enter Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army analysts estimate only about one of every five young men who entered the Army last year was a true volunteer and not draft-motivated.

This indicates how far the Army still must travel to come in sight of the all-volunteer force President Nixon hopes to achieve by mid-1973.

Manpower specialists feel the 1970 experience, the first full year under the random draft system, gave them a reliable idea of the extent men truly volunteered or were avoiding the draft in order to choose a branch of service and a special.

Kelley indicated about half of the enlisted volunteers are true volunteers. But he was omitting from his analysis the large bloc of enlistment, more attractive to the Army, who were talking about all services, not just the Army.

It was found that 64,000 men in this draft-unvulnerable group enlisted in the Army in 1970—about 21 per cent of the men below the Vietnam war peak of 3.5 million, places considerable importance on maintaining the strength of the regular military establishment.

The Army study and Kelley's testimony agree generally that somewhere around 70 per cent of the new enlistants into the National Guard and reserve are drafted. The administration has developed an elaborate program aimed at making military service more attractive, including guard and reserve enlistees is only part of the difficulty confronting the armed services, particularly the Army. Re-enlistments fell last year to their lowest point since the mid-1950s and ROTC enrollments also were way down.

Nitrates in Excessive Quantities Can be Dangerous

BY RAY PAGEL

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — Nitrates are a good thing, and highly essential, but in excessive quantities, they are bad.

In drinking water, they can cause illness and, rarely, death of human infants.

In forage, they can impair the health and sometimes kill farm animals.

These points were made here Tuesday afternoon at the opening session of a three-day conference on nitrates, phosphates and farm animal wastes.

Ecosystems

About 75 farmers, University Extension personnel and others were registered for the meeting at the Hotel Northland. Similar conferences viewing rural Wisconsin ecosystems are being held this week in Madison and Eau Claire.

"Use good judgment, adopt recommended procedures," was the advice on application of nitrogen fertilizers from Dr. D. A. Rohweder, University of Wisconsin agronomist.

He pointed out that plants use nitrogen from the soil in the form of nitrates. Nitrogen is a chemical element, while nitrates are chemical compounds in various forms.

"Farmers are using more nitrogen to get high yields, so we need to know how plants and nitrogen react," Rohweder stressed. "Toxic conditions can build up as the use of fertilizer is increased."

Factors Listed

Nutrient deficiencies, drought, temperature, sunlight, plant damage and herbicides are environmental factors in the nitrate picture, according to Rohweder. He noted that concentrations can be relatively high in corn silage. They remain generally low in small grains and ripe corn, and in alfalfa cut after the early bud stage.

"Application of herbicides can increase the amount of nitrates in crops, but the result still may be favorable when you kill weeds that are high in nitrates," the agronomist said.

Sources of available nitrogen as a factor in the nitrate problem were identified by Dr. Leo M. Walsh, University of Wisconsin soil science professor.

Among agricultural sources are organic matter in the soil, crop residues, manure, legumes and commercial fertilizer.

Precipitation

"Precipitation probably accounts for twice as much nitrogen as the amount that is applied through fertilizer annually," Walsh commented.

Named as non-agricultural sources were industry, domestic sewage, septic tanks, solid wastes, roadside erosion, and blue-green algae which take nitrogen from the air. Walsh didn't regard lawn and garden fertilizer as much of a factor, but cautioned that the spreader shouldn't spill over on the sidewalk or driveway.

"Farmers should be more concerned in the future about soil and water conservation to prevent erosion, and about handling manure," Walsh advised.

Surface Water

Despite what you may have read or seen on TV, surface water levels of nitrates are very low except in a few isolated instances. That was the claim of George Enfield, a soil specialist with the USDA in Washington.

"A recent study showed that there has been no increase in recent years," he asserted.

"The nitrate situation in Wisconsin rivers is not too bad," he added, "but you will find it a little bit high where you find the people."

Groundwater movements were discussed by D. A. Stephenson, a University of Wisconsin professor. He said 10 to 15 per cent of all precipitation becomes groundwater, and can bring nitrates with it when it gets back to the surface.

New London Drafts Liberal Ordinance For Snowmobiles

NEW LONDON — After working on an ordinance since December, the City Council Tuesday finally heard the first reading of the final draft on control of snowmobiles.

The proposed ordinance will establish a curfew from 10:30 p.m. to 7 a.m. daily, but at the same time will allow snowmobilers to use trails during those hours to traverse the city or to get their machines home.

The ordinance, although it lists specific areas for operation, actually allows snowmobiling anywhere in the city as long as the operator has the permission of the property owner whose land he crosses. Mayor S. W. Krostue noted that basically the ordinance leaves the use of the machines in the city up to the snowmobilers. He said that if they use common sense and courtesy, they won't have any problems.

Abuse Permission

He did warn, however, that "if they abuse the permission from private property owners," they (property owners) may well ask the snowmobilers be banned from the city entirely.

The ordinance states that snowmobiles can be operated in Hatten Park, Riverside Park, the Montgomery Street dump site, the north side industrial park, and on marked routes.

Snowmobiles will be allowed to cross streets, as long as they come to a complete stop, yield to all traffic, and proceed at a rate not to exceed 10 miles per hour. They can only cross at a 90 degree angle to the traveled portion of the road.

Routes other than those specified will be designated by the council committee, board of health, safety and welfare, and police chief.

After Hours

Ald. Walter Fredericks, chairman of the judicial committee, indicated that the snowmobilers could ride the machines on routes through the city and to their homes (if they have marked routes, and permission of the private property owners) after curfew hours. He stated that this clause had been added because so many snowmobilers indicated that they rode nights, and came home later than the proposed curfew.

Douglas Wolfe, an interested property owner, asked if the machines would be allowed to use Pfeiffer and Abrahams parks for trails. He was told that it was not stated in the ordinance, but that the committees and police chief could designate a trail in these areas.

The ordinance was changed to allow the committees and police chief's marked areas also to serve as a place where the snowmobilers could load and unload their machines.

It was noted that any snowmobilers could come in on the trails and load their machines in a loading area after curfew hours.

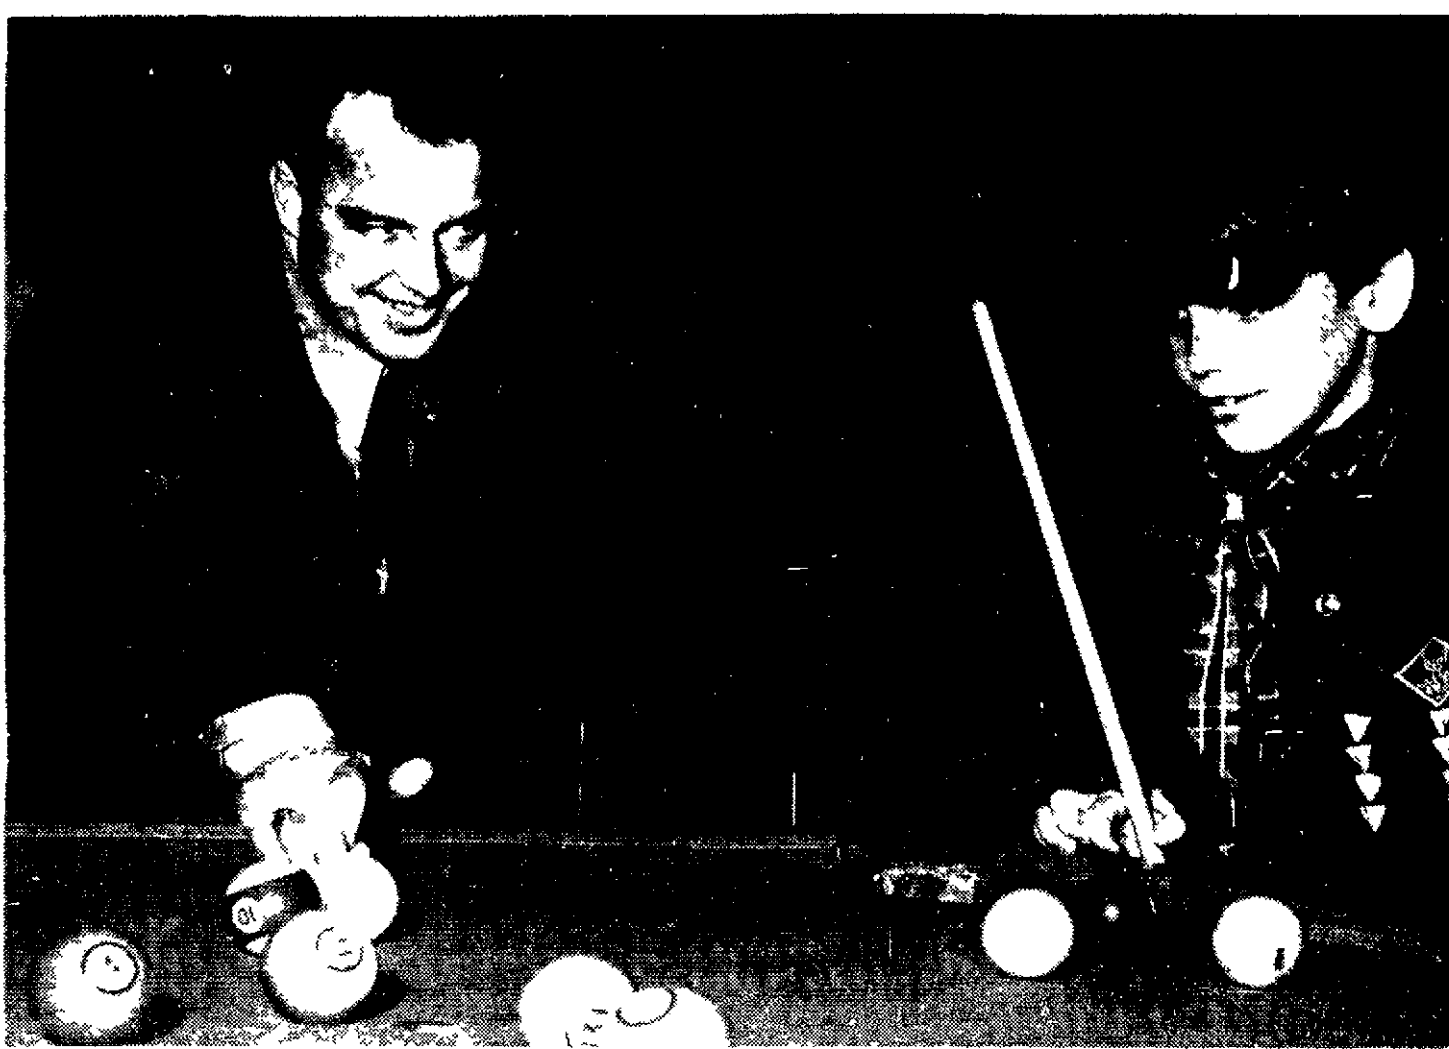

Violation Penalties

Penalties for violations of the ordinance are $10 to $20 for the first offense, and $25 to $50 for the second in the same year. If the fines are not paid, the sentence is 30 days in jail, and the snowmobile can be impounded.

Krostue told aldermen that he thought the ordinance was fair and allowed a give and take exchange on each side.

"We are a far cry from what we had originally," he noted.

The ordinance will be presented at the next council meeting for final action.

Neenah Man Is Bound Over in Theft Incident

Lack of Evidence Casts Out Second Count for City Man

One theft charge against a Neenah man was bound over to the Circuit Court Tuesday morning, but a second count dropped for want of evidence.

The action was taken after a preliminary hearing for Richard Van Roy, 23, of 692 Lake St., by Outagamie County Judge Gustave J. Keller.

No date was set for further proceedings in the Circuit Court for Van Roy on the theft of a garden tractor from David Nelson, route 2, Shiocton, last May 27. David Van Eyck, 20, of 1627 W. Summer St., previously pleaded guilty to that charge and will be sentenced next Tuesday. Van Roy is free on $1,500 bond.

Authorities, who allege that the men were part of a large theft ring operating out of the Fox Valley which was cracked last September, believed that Van Roy also took a lawn tractor from the Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, 2330 E. Calumet St., on July 2.

A defense attorney cross-examined the state's key witness on that theft, Donald Johnson, 31, 2114 E. Esther St. Johnson whose 3-year prison sentence was modified to three years' probation in mid-November for furnishing valuable information to police and sheriff's investigators which detailed activities of the ring, wasn't definite on circumstances surrounding the July theft this morning on the witness stand.

Since probable cause that a crime had been committed was not established, Assistant Dist. Atty. R. Thomas Cane moved for dismissal of the July count against Van Roy. Keller granted that motion.

Here's How to Stop Smut Mail

If you don't want to receive smut mail, all you have to do is say so.

The nation's 32,000 post offices are accepting applications from people who want their names added to a list of persons to whom ads coming within a statutory definition of "sexually oriented" advertisements may not be mailed.

The postal service is compling a list of those persons not wanting smut mail, and the first list will be available to mailers about Feb. 20. Mailers must purchase this list, according to the law, and use it to avoid mailing "sexually oriented" materials to the persons on the list.

The law is a part of the Postal Reorganization Act and carries severe civil and criminal penalties for violators.

In Appleton, application forms can be received, and completed ones returned to the assistant postmaster's office. Clerks will assist in filling out the form, if necessary.

Forms will be mailed to those who can't come to the post office, Francis Sumnicht, postmaster, said.

Each form contains an identifying number which should be retained by the applicant for further reference, he said. For example, it's important if he should receive smut mail after 30 days from the date he applied for the restriction.

The ban is good for five years and can easily be extended.

CLINTONVILLE — The Area Concert Theatre (ACT) has signed a contract with Allied Concert Services for the 1971-72 series consisting of the St. Olaf College orchestra, the Tucson Boys Chorus, and the Medleys (duo-painists).

Davis Thomas, ACT membership chairman, has announced that season memberships for the 1971-72 series will be $8 for adults and $4 for students. Present membership holders are asked to bring their renewals for the next season when they come to the concert Feb. 10.

Thomas reported that if renewals are not made by Feb. 10, cancellations will be assumed and tickets will be sold.

Waupaca Parents Told to be Part of Educational Planning

WAUPACA — The new Parent-Teacher Association and a part of making those plans work," he added. "We cannot operate in a society such as ours, where we talk so glibly about involvement and then disavow ourselves."

Eighty-five signed membership cards, pledging that they support those things in education which are good and discuss them with their children and those aspects which are not. They wanted to keep the school good," Brittelli warned. "We program alive in the community are here to understand each other — the educators to understand parents, and parents to understand educators. We went on to stress the importance of parents being a part of what is happening in educational program, something education in Waupaca is wrong."

"It is not what I say, what parents give away a basic the board of education says, right when they do not make what the teachers say, but what themselves a part of the plan — you say as taxpayers and parents which has meaning," he concluded. He urged parents to involve themselves, voice their opinions, be honest with the educators; and to demand changes, if need be, which will benefit children and the schools.

Parents also heard that there was no way they could shirk the responsibility for their children, from guest speaker the Rev. B. L. Marcell, president of the 7th District PTA, Wisconsin Rapids. "It is the business of parents to see that the job of educating their children is done and that it is done well," Marcell began. This is accomplished in a close parent-teacher relationship, demonstrated by interest in the child and the school.

Safety Building Gets State OK

Preliminary approval has been received from the State Industrial Commission for the Outagamie County Safety Building.

Eugene Boldt, of Sauter Seaborn Duszak and Paynter, architects, told the county board's special building committee Tuesday night that they were "well into" the working drawings for the building and they would be ready for bidding about April 15.

Supv. Jerome Hiler, Appleton, committee chairman, indicated preliminary bonding resolutions may be submitted to the county board Tuesday.

Boldt said the only unsettled issue with the industrial commission is over the amount of window space in the third floor Huber Law prisoner dormitories. The industrial commission wants more window space than provided in the plans, Boldt said.

He added they plan to appeal the commission's objections on the grounds the building will be air conditioned and will have an emergency power system in the event of power failure.

Ben Seaborn said a building budget is being prepared for the county and assured the committee they are sticking to the $2 million price. "I feel those figures are locked in," Seaborn said.

He added the only area where the cost was not fixed was in building equipment. The county, he said, would have to decide what is wanted in the building.

Seaborn said a meeting was held with Motorola Corp. which installed the existing communications system in the sheriff's department, and assurance was given that the present system can simply be expanded for the new building.

He said they were also looking into television as a means of monitoring remote areas.

The committee gave the architects the go-ahead for basement plans without provisions for emergency government space. County officials had been looking into the possibility of participating federal funds for any area used by emergency government. "There is no money available," Hiler said.

An area 80 feet by 90 feet will be left undeveloped for future expansion.

Boldt said first floor plans have been reviewed several times with Sheriff Calvin Spice. Judge Nick Schaefer and Dist. Atty. James Long and are nearly complete.

Eggert Retires From Post as Welfare Chief

ALFRED R. Eggert retired Monday as director of the Outagamie County Department of Social Services.

The Board of Social Services will meet this morning to discuss a successor to Eggert who had been on the job only for brief periods since suffering a heart attack last August. His heart condition reportedly has not improved sufficiently to allow him to continue as head of the welfare agency.

Eggert, about 62, had indicated in December that he probably would retire, depending on action taken on his application to the Wisconsin Retirement Fund for disability annuity and on extension of coverage under the county's group health insurance carrier.

Supv. G. Allen Bubolz of Appleton, chairman of the county board's finance committee, said he informed supervisors Monday that Eggert's insurance would carry over from the county's 1970 group carrier.

William Prang, who had been named acting director in Eggert's absence, has indicated he is not interested in the director's post, a member of the Board of Social Services said today. He said that no action has been taken to fill the post.

Prang had been a social worker in the welfare agency. Second in command in the county department is Ray F. Kasky, who was hired as deputy director in December. The former Outagamie Welfare caseworker came back to the department from Green County where he was welfare director.

Park Sewage Solution To Await Cost Study

More specific cost estimates on a solution to the sewage problem in Plamann Park will be sought in further discussions with a Menasha consulting firm, the Outagamie County Board's public property and parks committee decided Tuesday.

McMahon Associates, Inc., last month had submitted preliminary cost estimates ranging from $30,000 to $180,000 for a number of long- and short-term methods of handling the problem which has become increasingly critical as park use intensifies.

Among the solutions suggested by McMahon were connections with Appleton and Grand Chute sewerage systems and construction of a park sewage plant.

The county committee has met with Appleton and Grand Chute officials to discuss the sewage alternatives involving the two municipalities.

McMahon had informed the county that accurate cost figures would require detailed measurements, determination of alternate routes for locations of sewers and studies of soil conditions.

The committee agreed with Supv. Herman Rupp of Appleton who cautioned that since there is not yet a development plan for the park — including the 143 additional acres being acquired — permanent steps to handle the sewage problem there should not be taken immediately. Planning, he said, should be done with "an eye to the future."

It was indicated that temporary measures may have to continue for up to five years. Last summer, temporary measures included pumping out septic tanks several times a week during periods of peak park use.

However, Supv. Nick Karras of Appleton warned that even continuation on a temporary solution basis will involve some expenditures.

He also noted that when permanent steps are taken, federal Land and Water Conservation funds might be available to help finance the cost of sewer work.

Rupp suggested that residents of the surrounding Apple Creek area be surveyed to determine what they think about becoming part of an areawide sewage system. Several homeowners in the park vicinity have experienced serious sewage problems which experts have stated is a result of the physical characteristics of the land there.

In addition to approving a motion approving another meeting with McMahon, the committee voted to install automatic shutoff valves on sinks and urnals in the park shelter houses.

The measures were among several suggested by Frank M. Charlesworth, county coordinator of public services to help relieve heavy use of the sewage facilities on a temporary basis

Waupaca Plans Amusement Device License

WAUPACA — The City Council considered an ordinance for licensing amusement devices at its regular Tuesday meeting and decided to take final action at the Feb. 16 meeting.

The ordinance will require any person firm or corporation providing any amusement device for entertainment of their patrons and customers to pay the following annual license fee — $5 for each pool table, billiard table, pinball machine, bowling machine, each lane of a bowling alley and shuffle alley — $10 for each juke box.

Religious, fraternal nonprofit and municipally owned devices will be exempt.

Expiration Date
All licenses would expire on the 30th day of June each year. The fee will be one-half of the High School for local and area specified fee for any period less than six months.

All persons or owners now operating the named amusement devices must immediately apply for license after the ordinance is passed and published.

If a person in possession of any one of the devices in operation does not have a license, the machine can be removed at the order of the Chief of Police, the owner is subject to prosecution and no license shall be issued.

Dave Schwenn, owner of the Brung'er in Restaurant applied to the council licensing committee to serve draft beer in the Pizza Cellar.

Same Restrictions
The self-imposed restrictions which Schwenn stipulated at the time his original license was granted remain the same. These are:

- Only bottle beer will be sold upstairs in the restaurant.
- Under no circumstances will beer be sold on the property after 11 p.m.
- No carry-out beer will be sold.
- Beer will be served only with food.

The license was approved unanimously.

Ald. Waldemar Johnson (2nd) proposed that the council extend the monthly salary of Joseph A. Pollack, airport manager, through March, 1971, at the rates of $150 per month. Before April 1 the airport committee will make recommendations for operation of the airport.

The request was granted by a vote of 9 to 1.

Lehrer Landfill Still Operating

Owner Suffers Broken Wrist in Unloading Accident

James Lehrer's sanitary landfill operation apparently will continue serving eastern Fox Cities communities despite Lehrer's second adversity in less than a week.

Lehrer suffered a broken left wrist, multiple bruises and lacerations about noon Tuesday. He is in satisfactory condition at Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah.

Last Thursday a fire destroyed two tractors, a truck, three bulldozers and the building they were in on Lehrer's farm on State 55 east of Kaukaun. Some of the equipment was for the burning process at the landfill, and the loss was estimated at over $100,000.

Lehrer said after the fire that he planned to lease equipment temporarily to continue his landfill operation. A spokesman today said he expected the landfill operation would be hampered but would continue despite Lehrer's absence.

Lehrer was injured when the cable connecting a rubbish incinerator box from his disposal truck apparently failed while he and two of his men were unloading the box behind the Kimberly-Clark Corp. Lakeview Mill. Neenah A.K.C. spokesman said Lehrer told him that the box slid pinning him against the building wall.

Lehrer had been directing the truck driver into position and was standing beside the truck it was reported.

The state fire marshal was at the fire scene Monday but no report on the cause has been released yet.

Hilbert Approves

Stockbridge Rejects Merger

BY HAZEL THIEL

Stockbridge School District electors will meet again on Feb. 22 and don't want to merge with Hilbert, but Hilbert electors favor merging with Stockbridge.

These were the decisions of an advisory vote taken in both districts to decide whether a referendum should be conducted on the issue.

The results of the vote announced after a public informational meeting here Tuesday night, were: Hilbert, 151 Yes and 38 No; Stockbridge, 55 Yes and 102 No.

Boards of education at a joint meeting last April decided to investigate merger possibilities, realizing that the two districts had similar limitations particularly in curriculums and finances.

The Stockbridge district, one of the smallest in the Fox Valley area, has been urged by the State Department of Public Instruction to upgrade its curriculum by merging with another district for the last 10 years. The district has been involved in numerous detachment procedures with residents seeking attachment to Chilton, and currently has a case involving three parcels pending in Circuit Court.

The district is appealing the state's decision, which upheld that of Cesa 10 Agency School Committee to allow the petitioners to be attached to the Chilton School District.

The Hilbert district is faced with overcrowding and the need for additional facilities. A similar situation is expected in the Stockbridge district in the very near future. Board of education members believe that by merging the districts they could offer an improved curriculum with more for the tax dollar and could better afford to build a consolidated high school.

Citizen advisory committees have worked since October to official provide information which was distributed in brochure form to residents of both districts. In the event that both favored merging, the Stockbridge board voted unanimously to withdraw its Circuit Court appeal.

Five Sites
Five rural sites centrally located to both districts were investigated by a committee and options taken for the possible combined high school.

A public informational meeting was conducted in Hilbert Monday and ballots sealed in a bank depository bag, which was taken by Stockbridge board members to be counted simultaneously with those from that district.

The Hilbert meeting was termed very amiable by one official.

The Stockbridge meeting brought strong opposition to the proposal, particularly from Otto Meyer, retired superintendent and teacher at the school.

Meyer urged retention of the Stockbridge School District.

In a previous advisory referendum on merging, both districts turned it down by a 60 to 40 per cent margin.

Hilbert is an integrated aid district, offering 52 courses. Stockbridge is a basic aid district, offering 32 courses. In a merged situation, 62 courses could be offered. Authorities were of the opinion a merged district would receive an integrated rating.

The future of the two districts is thus a question. One woman stated at the announcement of the vote, "This probably is the end of both districts."

One Stockbridge board member said, "I could just lie right down and die. This is the end of the Stockbridge District."

Parents Told To be Part of School Plans

service to our youth," he continued. "We try to meet the challenges of today and tomorrow. Such things as disease, despair, drug abuse, mental illness, poverty — anything which affects the child is our business."

He suggested that parents continually ask themselves:

— does my child have everything I would like him to have in his school program?

— is he being prepared to earn a good living?

— is he learning to get along with others, become a part of his community?

— am I giving my child the time he deserves?

— am I working with his teacher or teachers to obtain any special helps he may need?

"We must mobilize all the resources of the community to reach our common goal," he concluded. "Never was the PTA better equipped to see that the needs of all children are filled. Parents and teachers have to become more involved in the solution."

"How do we do this? Work where you are on a person to person basis. Remember that YOU count."

It was pointed out in a film strip, describing the 73-year-old PTA, that it originally was not a quiet organization — but formed in wrath over the misuse and abuse of children. The PTA cares about children and the parents and teachers who educate them. "Cooperation is the bone and sinew of PTA, and it insists upon equal educational opportunity for all. The parents and teachers make it happen."

The new Waupaca PTA, which includes parents of pupils from kindergarten through grade eight, was started by a group of parents who still operate as a steering committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Johnson, co-chair the committee. Other members are Mrs. Arthur Barber, Mrs. Del Glass, Mrs. Warren Lund, William Williams, Mrs. Leland Thompson, Robert Groshek, Mrs. Al Gorski, and Everett Anderson.

There will be an election of officers at the March 1 meeting and the new PTA will meet on the first Monday each month of the school year.

Johnson announced that parents will be involved throughout the school year in a variety of projects to meet student needs. A contest was held in each grade to "get the parents out" for the organizational meeting.

GOP Considers Lower Age for Membership

Party Proposal Seen as Central Issue in County

The minimum age for voting membership in the Wisconsin Republican Party will be a central issue of the Outagamie County GOP caucus March 11.

Delegates to the county caucus will vote on a party constitutional amendment which also will be up for consideration at the state party convention this spring.

At present, the minimum age for membership is 21, with persons under that age belonging to the Young Republican Federation or the Teen-Age Republicans.

The county party executive board, planning Tuesday for coming county party events, singled out the proposed age change as an issue likely to stir debate at the annual caucus.

County Officers Also on the agenda will be selection of county party officers and of delegates to represent the county unit at the forthcoming 8th Congressional District caucus and state party convention.

Resolutions stating party positions on current political issues also are traditionally on the caucus agenda, but at present their content is undecided.

One resolution narrowly defeated at last year's caucus supported giving voting privileges to 18-year-olds. A recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling made the question moot at the federal level, with the right to vote for President and members of Congress extended to 18-year-olds. At the state level, however, legislation must be adopted before that age group may take part in state and local elections.

The county caucus is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 11, at the Conway Motor Inn.

Stanley York, recently appointed state GOP executive director, will be the speaker at the county unit's annual Lincoln Day dinner, according to Dr. David Grunwaldt, Kaukauna, party chairman. The dinner will be held Feb. 23 at the Left Guard Charcoal House on W. College Ave.

Candidates' Night The local group also voted Tuesday to co-sponsor with the county Democrats and League of Women Voters a candidates' night meeting at Madison Junior High School at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 25, with candidates in local non-partisan elections this spring featured.

Grunwaldt, on request of Dist. Atty. James Long, a Republican, agreed to ask the state party headquarters for an accounting of funds collected locally and spent by the state party during the past year.

"We should at least know what happens to our money that we sent in," Long said after the executive committee learned from a year-end financial statement that the county organization sent more than $33,000 to the state headquarters last year.

The action is a mild parallel to recent action by county Democrats, who strengthened their expression of interest in state party finances by withholding contributions to the state organization until they receive an accounting. No similar action was proposed by their Republican counterparts.

Tentative Wage Agreement Reached by Departments

Tentative agreement has been reached on wage pacts with the Outagamie County Sheriff's Department and the Department of Social Services.

Contract proposals were approved Monday by the county board's executive committee. Board action is expected next week. Informal agreement had been given by bargaining agencies for both departments.

The 1971 contract with the Law Enforcement Association, said which had retained attorney Gordon Mase, Appleton, proposed for 9 per cent across-the-board raises for some 41 sheriff's department employees. Not covered by the proposed pact are the sheriff, undersheriff and heads of the investigation and traffic bureaus, who received raises under contracts approved earlier.

Under the new pact, employees also would receive a two-hour cut in their work week, from 42 to 40 hours, and increased vacation and longevity benefits. The shorter work week would take effect April 1 while the pay raises would be retroactive to Jan. 1.

A more complicated pact with some 40 administrative, and clerical personnel and social workers in the Department of Social Services provided 9 per cent raises for 1970 and one-step increased for 1971. The county had failed to reach an accord on a 1970 contract with the department and the salary dispute had gone to fact-finding.

9 Per Cent Increase The 9 per cent increase, based on the average wage in effect in the department on Dec. 31, 1969, would be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1970. For the professional social workers, it meant an increase of $62.20 per month for 1970, Woehler said, and for other employees it meant $35.33 a month more. The 1971 contract would be retroactive to Jan. 1.

Woehler said the proposed contract, negotiated with Local 451A of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, would cost about $26,600 for 1970 and another $14,400 for 1971. However, the state will pick up about 82 per cent of both amounts, Woehler said.

In other business, the executive committee — Recommended reclassifying the veteran's service officer from county pay grade 16 to grade 20, effective Feb. 1. The increase would put Francis D. Heesacker's salary at $893 a month, $96 more than he was receiving.

Soil Borings, Testings — Adopted a resolution seeking the transfer of $1,000 from the contingency fund to a new fund on which the ad hoc committee on solid waste disposal can draw primarily to cover the cost of soil borings and testings at sites being considered for a disposal site. No action was taken on a suggestion by Board Chairman R. A. S. e l l DeLaHunt that a fund be created from which all ad hoc committees could draw.

Approved a $250 expenditure for sign space at Goodland Field in Appleton, promoting Outagamie County.

Authorized a special health subcommittee to make trips to Eau Claire and Waukesha to study health facilities.

CLINTONVILLE — The Clintonville chapter of the Order of Eastern Star will be host to state dignitaries at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Masonic Temple.

All chapters in central Wisconsin will be represented.

The meeting will be a work night with special emphasis on the ritualistic work of the organization.

A 5 p.m. smorgasbord supper will be served at the Hotel Marston.

Mrs. Leonard Braith is chairman of the event. Lunch will be served after the meeting by the Past Matrons of which Mrs. J. H. Stein is president.

Battle With Paper Company Might Become a Landmark

BY CAROLYN STEWART
Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The State Department of Natural Resources is charged with setting and enforcing pollution abatement standards for the state's water, air and land resources. But the extent of its authority and definition of its proper role in relation, particularly, to private industry, were questioned last week as the agency conducted a rehearing on an order issued to Fort Howard Paper Co., Green Bay.

The question that was raised and is still to be answered is: How far can the DNR go in determining the production procedures of an individual manufacturer and to what extent should it become involved in competition among companies within the same industry?

Before it started, the Fort Howard rehearing appeared as if it would be an orderly procedure to settle a disagreement between the DNR and Green Bay's largest industry.

The hearing promised to be complicated because of the technical nature of the subject, involving discussion of chemical and mechanical processes to change the character and content of manufacturing effluent.

Legal Complexities

But the content of pollutants and abatement procedures were largely glossed over as the hearing turned to grappling with complexities of a legal — and, some might contend, moral — nature.

The DNR hearing agent, Andrew Damon, the Fort Howard attorney, Irvin Charne, and other legal counsel battled over the limits of the state laws regarding pollution control, and the question of how much specific information about paper companies could or should be made public as a means of defining the issues and bringing the case to a solution.

As a result of the importance of the procedural issues raised, the decision rendered in the present case, whatever turn it takes, is likely to be a landmark that will guide the DNR's future ventures in enforcing pollution abatement procedures. And, since there are at least two distinct sides to the argument, the decision is likely to be so controversial and so debatable that it is quite possible the issue will end up in the courts.

If, however, the Fort Howard decision itself is not appealed, separate rulings on the issues raised can be expected to be appealed, perhaps all the way to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Citizen's Initiative

The ball started rolling last spring when six Wisconsin citizens, exercising an option open to them under a 1965 pollution law, requested that the DNR hold a hearing on charges of excessive pollution by Fort Howard. The group was headed by Donald O. Peterson of Eau Claire, who was at the time campaigning for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. The hearing was held in Green Bay last June.

Discrimination Claimed

In October, the department issued an amended pollution abatement order to the company, requiring that it double the pollution abatement efforts it already was under order to make by December 1972. The amendment required that Fort Howard reduce its biochemical oxygen demand (BOD) load from the 35 pounds ordered in December 1969, to 14 pounds, and its suspended solids load from the originally ordered 20 pounds to 15 pounds per ton of production capacity daily.

Jury Trial Set for Appleton Man in Fox Chase by Snowmobile

OSHKOSH — A 20-year-old Appleton man was arraigned in Winnebago County Court Branch 3 Tuesday afternoon on a charge of pursuing game on a snowmobile.

Alan J. Lanser, 2223 Apple Creek Road, pleaded not guilty to pursuing a fox on his snowmobile. The complaint said the offense occurred Jan. 16 in the Town of Clayton.

Lanser was released on his own recognizance. A jury trial will be held Feb. 18.

Little Chute Collects Nearly Half Its Taxes

LITTLE CHUTE — Total taxes collected through Jan. 31 amounted to $378,117 which leaves $422,271 remaining to be collected, according to Village Clerk Gerald Locy.

This year, 1,207 persons paid $361,165 in real estate taxes during the first month compared to 1,223 paying $306,979 during the comparable period last year. Personal property tax collection this year amounted to $16,932 with 67 persons paying compared to only $6,641 collected in the first month last year. Percentage of total paid is about the same for both years, but Locy was unable to estimate the number paying taxes in full or on the installment plan.

In contesting the order and asking for the rehearing, Fort Howard claimed that the order was discriminatory since the company is the only Fox River paper firm to have received so stiff an order. It further contended that the procedure through which the order was arrived is unconstitutional since the company already was under order and was making progress in compliance with it at the time of the six-citizen action. Finally, the company argued that the specific details of the order serve to limit the production capacity of the company to an arbitrary and artificially low level, that is unrelated to its actual production capacity.

Before the amended order was issued, it was generally understood that the DNR was proceeding step by step to cut, and ultimately to end, pollution of the state's waterways; that once orders were issued, companies would have adequate time to comply with them and that only then would new, more stringent orders be issued. The assumption was based largely on the fact that constructing the facilities required to meet the terms of an order takes a considerable amount of planning and construction time and that new orders would fowl up the orderly, if slow, procedure.

Uniformity Expected

It also was assumed that orders affecting similar companies on the same waterway would be nearly uniform, especially since the 1969 orders, the first major orders to paper companies, were almost identical for all the Fox River paper firms.

The DNR, however, argued in the hearing that neither uniformity nor permanence is to be assumed when its orders are issued. The attorney for the DNR, Edward Main, cited the broad charge to the department regarding water pollution as evidence. It states in part:

"Because of the importance of Lakes Superior and Michigan and Green Bay as vast water resource reservoirs, water quality standards for those rivers emptying into Lakes Superior, Michigan and Green Bay shall be as high as practicable."

Thus, the Fort Howard case raises the question of whether the DNR is bound morally, if not legally, to treat all firms within the same industry and located on the same waterway the same, in order to avoid interference with the free-enterprise that exists within the industry. Most other forms of governmental regulation of business, for whatever purpose, treat industries as a whole. If one competitor is required to make pollution abatement expenditures far in excess of the commitments required of other firms, its competitive position is damaged.

DNR's Role

On the other hand, given the DNR's mandate, one could question whether it is required to play its role for cleaning up the environment wholly within the confines of an economic system.

The DNR's ruling in this case will place it on one side or the other of this philosophical-economic battle. If a compromise is not reached the courts may have to decide the issue.

A related question was raised after Damon, the hearing agent, honored the request of the Fort Howard attorney to subpoena records regarding production, production capacity and pollution abatement efforts of all other paper companies on the Fox River and other tributaries feeding into Green Bay, and the DNR records relating to those same firms.

At the start of the hearing, attorneys for 10 of the subpoenaed companies moved to have the subpoenas quashed. They charged that making the information public would reveal important trade secrets that must be kept confidential in a highly competitive industry. Action on the motions was postponed, and Damon ordered the attorneys participating in the hearing to skirt the issue temporarily, by relying on the DNR's records.

Question of Confidence

But when an attempt was made to produce DNR files on the same companies, the attorneys again complained. They stated that the information in the DNR files was obtained from the paper firms with the promise that it would remain confidential and that the critical information would be coded so that individual companies could not be identified.

Whether such a promise was made was not determined during the hearing. But the situation is an awkward one since ordinarily records held by a public agency in Wisconsin are considered public records unless specifically exempted by state law.

An attorney general's opinion has been sought on the question. But his opinion on whether records are public or private also will be the subject of controversy.

Fort Howard has argued that it cannot determine if it has been discriminated against unless it can determine if the orders on other firms are related to their actual or to artificial production capacities. Although in the present case Fort Howard has been anxious to see other companies records, Fort Howard is not more desirous of revealing its own statistics than any of the other firms.

Court Battle

Although the Fort Howard case may be settled through a compromise that involves the DNR's lowering its requirements for Fort Howard, if the paper company will agree not to pursue the issue, the matter cannot be skirted indefinitely.

Damon favors pursuing the attorney general's opinion as a first step, realizing that a court battle probably will arise. But he hopes the court battle can be waged independently of the issues in a specific case, because the process of appealing to the Circuit, state Supreme and U. S. Supreme courts could take years to complete. If the question is tied to the settlement of a specific DNR antipollution action, enforcement of the order could be barred while the issue is in court and pollution abatement, a slow procedure at best, could be set back for a long time.

The Fort Howard case serves to point out both loopholes in the 1965 pollution law and questions that were not even covered in writing the law. The answers will have to be found so that the DNR knows the limits to its authority and the proper means of dealing with private industry.

In the interim, compromise is the only answer. It will find the DNR backing down on pollution abatement orders in order to be able to exercise at least limited control over pollution and will cause industries to accept a blanket order for all firms in order to avoid having to reveal confidential information that could prove the case for exceptions.

Single Citizen Pollution Suit Bill Introduced

Legislation by Lorge Would Give Courts Authority

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A single resident could institute action in a state circuit court for the protection of the environment under provisions of a bill introduced in the Senate by Sen. Gerald Lorge R-Bear Creek.

The bill that would give circuit courts broad authority to adjudicate complaints against persons, political subdivisions, the state or its agencies would be supplementary to existing environmental protection provisions in the state law.

In effect, then, the bill would spread the opportunity to bring charges of pollution against a polluter among more persons and agencies in the state than now permitted. Under the 1965 pollution law, six citizens acting together can request the Department of Natural Resources to hold a hearing on an alleged act of pollution, but that is the smallest number of laymen that can act at present.

The Lorge bill would give the circuit courts power to issue temporary and permanent relief orders, to order administrative proceedings now authorized under the law and to make subsequent, followup rulings after such proceedings.

No pollution, impairment or destruction of natural resources or the public trust would be permitted, "so long as there is a feasible and prudent alternative consistent with the reasonable requirements of public health, safety and welfare," according to the wording of the bill.

Wisconsin Telephone Company Phone Rate Hike Probe Okayed

MADISON AP — A resolution authorizing an Assembly committee to investigate the Public Service Commission's recent approval of a telephone rate increase was approved by the lower house Tuesday after heated debate.

With the Democratic majority prevailing by a 66-32 vote, the Commerce and Consumer Affairs Committee will conduct a public hearing Thursday night in Milwaukee.

Rep. Harout Sanasarian, D-Milwaukee, authored the resolution. He is chairman of the committee. Wisconsin Telephone Co. rate increases, authorized by a PSC order Jan. 22, would total about $7.5 million. The increase would follow on the heels of a hike last July.

Sanasarian contended his probe is "to serve the public interest." The Milwaukee City Council requested the hearing. Rep. John Shabaz, R - New Berlin, said Sanasarian was "prejudiced and biased" toward the PSC and suggested he was "advancing his own feelings and sentiments."

Another Republican, Donald Helgeson of Manitowoc, charged the hearing was a "witch hunt" and that Sanasarian was "playing to newspapers to support his own interests."

Much of the GOP opposition, however, was directed at the method of investigation. Harold Froehlich of Appleton and Earl McEassy of Fond du Lac said hearing should be scheduled if merited, but not voted on by resolution.

Warning against being "stampeded by political purposes," Froehlich proposed the matter be referred to a joint committee for study. McEassy concurred, calling for an investigation to determine if a hearing were justified.

In defense of the resolution, Democratic majority leader Norman Anderson of Madison said the hearing was to "restore confidence, not destroy confidence, in the PSC."

Assistant majority leader Herbert Grover of Shawano said the resolution form was to "extend a courtesy to the membership at large so we could all voice our opinion."

Fond du Lac Man

Former Prisoner Awarded $10,000

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The State Senate authorized payment of $10,000 to a former Fond du Lac man for what was considered his wrongful incarceration for a total of more than four years at the Green Bay reformatory.

On the recommendation of the state claims board, the Senate approved the payment to Jerry Lee Hohlt who was convicted in 1963 for illegal entry into his own home and two counts of forgery.

State Sen. Jack Steinhilber R-Oshkosh told the Senate the case involving Hohlt was a "shocking case of injustice" committed "by officers of the courts of this state and should be redressed." Steinhilber said the man, who was 19 at the time of his conviction, would not have been on probation if he had not been convicted, and he claimed an injustice was done in the original conviction.

The man was found guilty of parole violation after he attempted to settle and work in the Fond du Lac area following his release. He reportedly found the community so hostile that he left the state, was married and found work in California.

Appoint New Members To Board of Trustees At St. Norbert College

DE PERE — A retired insurance executive and the president of a Green Bay oil company have been appointed to the St. Norbert College board of trustees.

The appointees are Herbert E. Hoeft, 38, Green Bay, president of Christensen Oil Co.; and Carl N. Jacobs, 75, Stevens Point, former chairman of Sentry Life Insurance Co.

The new members are expected to attend the board's Feb. 17 meeting on campus. It will be the first session since that body announced Jan. 22 that it would expand from nine to 37 members to broaden its base of support. Appointment of Hoeft and Jacobs brings board membership to 17.

was returned here for parole violation and sent to the reformatory.

The discussion on the Senate floor was heated as senators claimed the payment would set a bad precedent that would prompt, according to Sen. Ronald Parys D-Milwaukee, everyone who is in the reformatory and wants to get out to seek money from the claims board.

"It is not going to end until the taxpayers of Wisconsin are broke," he predicted.

Attempts were made to send the item to the judiciary committee to hold a public hearing, and to postpone action on the claim indefinitely. Both failed to pass.

Ordinarily, recommendations from the claims board are approved without discussion since both the board and joint finance committee conduct rather thorough investigations and discussions of the claims and a small proportion of those presented are approved, according to Sen. Walter Hollander, R-Rosendale, chairman of the claims board and joint finance committee.

Hohlt had sought to claim $19,600 when he presented his case to the board before the 1969 legislature convened. His whereabouts at the present time are not known since such a long period has lapsed since the claim was heard and acted upon.

Kimberly Collects $800,881 in Taxes

KIMBERLY — Village Treasurer Mrs. Kathryn Lochschmidt reported collection of $800,981 in taxes after the first month of collection, leaving $870,070 to be collected from the $1,670,951 levy.

A total of 1,031 persons paid real estate taxes amounting to $754,550 and 33 paid personal property taxes amounting to $46,331 as of Jan. 31. A record is not kept on the number paying taxes in full or utilizing the installment plan, according to Mrs. Lochschmidt.

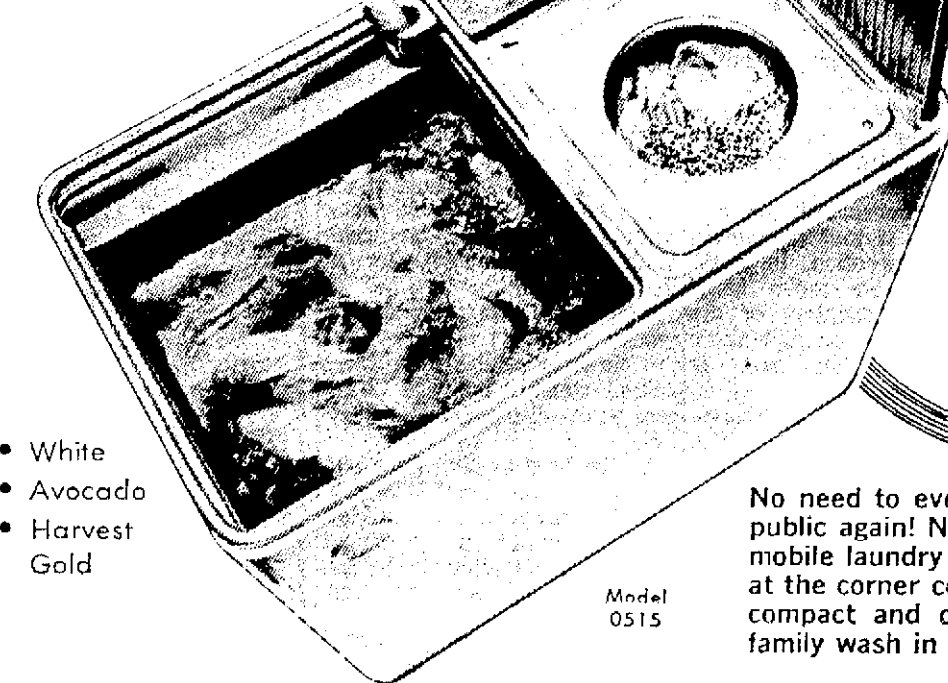

Total collected percentagewise is comparable to other years.
